ESTHER QUINN IN PECK SUIT TELLS ABOUT HER LIFE

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Miss Esther Quinn of Boston was the central figure in lively proceedings to-day when she was forced to answer a question pertaining to her past life as the result of an order obtained by Professor Harry Thurston Peck, recently ousted from Columbia, whom she is suing for $100,000 alleged breach of promise.

Miss Quinn who was stenographer in the brokerage firm of B F. Schieffels, raided several days ago by postoffice inspectors, proved to be a hard customer for C. B. Francis, lawyer for Professor Peck, when he questioned her in the office of her attorney, Daniel O'Reilly.

The complaint against the Professor proved equal to all attempts of the lawyer to attack her character, but frequently took refuge in the stereotyped reply of "I don't remember."

Professor Peck was not present at the examination.

Miss Quinn was clad in black, with white suede gloves, and with a blue veil wraped tightly around her face. While in court she raised her veil, but while being examined in the lawyer's office she kept her face covered.

Doesn't Remember Age.

Mr. Francis struck the first snag when he asked Miss Quinn her age. She declared she hadn't kept track of the years and did not know just how old she was.

"Well, how old do you think you are?" asked the lawyer.

"About thirty-four," was the reply; "younger, perhaps."

Then the lawyer wanted to know if she ever had any other name besides Esther Quinn.

"I had a confirmation name," said the witness. "Some people spelled it Cleophee and others Cleophine."

Miss Quinn said she was born in Massachusetts, but when asked what town replied without a smile on her face:

"I remember that far back."

Mr. Francis then read over a long list of hotels.

"Did you ever drink in any of them?" he asked.

"Drink what?" Miss Quinn asked him in reply.

"Wine, or any sort of liquor?"

She Even Bars Cocoa.

"I never drank anything but water or coffee in my life, not even cocoa."

Professor Peck's name was first mentioned when she was asked who the men were whom she met while employed on an afternoon newspaper of this city. She said that she had met Professor Peck's wife but was written stories under the name of Rafford Pike, and that he had dictated to her.

The lawyer then began to ask her about her family, which caused Mr. O'Reilly to object that the examination was being conducted apart from what the order called for.

"You are here simply to question Miss Quinn on whether she is a proper person or not," said the lawyer. "And it is none of your business what has become of her relations."

Mr. Francis persisted, however, and asked Miss Quinn if her father was dead.

"That does not make any difference," she replied, "and I refuse to answer any more questions about my family."

Her Memory Faits.

The witness said she had been a stenographer for fifteen years but couldn't remember when she started. She couldn't remember any of the places where she had lived before January of this year, and her memory also failed her when asked about various cities where she was said to have been employed.

"Now," said the lawyer, suddenly switching his line of questions, "did you ever smoke a cigarette?"

"The nearest I ever got to that was being forced to smell the smoke of Professor Peck's cigarettes," said the witness.

Miss Quinn denied that she had ever had any trouble at home or with her parents while they were living here.

"Didn't your mother make you leave Boston because of your manner of living?" she was asked.

"Never," replied the witness, indignantly.

Miss Esther Quinn.

JUSTICE MOODY IS OFF TO WASHINGTON

MAGNOLIA, Oct. 10.—Declining President Taft's offer of the use of the Dolphin, Justice Moody, whose resignation from the United States Supreme Court becomes effective next month, to-day started from Magnolia to Washington, by which city he will make his permanent home. A special coach was attached to the regular train leaving Magnolia this afternoon. The coach was transferred from the North to the South Station for the justice and his party to catch the Federal express to New York. Accompanying the justice is his sister, Miss Mary K. Moody, and his physician, Dr. James F. Jackson.

DANIEL J. KILEY FOR THE SENATE

"Daniel J. Kiley for Senator in the Third Suffolk District" was one of the rumors circulated in political circles to-day. Senator Joseph F. Lomasney, so the story went, is to be withdrawn as the Democratic nominee, and Kiley is to be substituted in his place.

Kiley votes in Ward 8. He served in the House of Representatives a decade ago. He tried twice for the Democratic nomination for Senator, once in a real contest and the other time in Hendricks Club conference, but was frozen out each time.

For the last two years he has not been over friendly with the Lomasneys, especially with "Brother Joe." Recently his differences with Martin were patched up. Martin himself is going back to the House next year, and the improprieties of brothers bottling up two of the three legislative seats in their district for themselves is said to have led to an agreement on Kiley's substitution.

SCHOONER SAVED BY TUG FROM ROCKS

The Canadian schooner Alanna was saved from crashing on the treacherous ledges of Grave's Light to-day by the timely arrival of the tug H. A. Mathes. The schooner lost her mainsail in the gale last night and was making for the harbor under foresail and jib. As she approached the entrance, she became unmanageable and began [illegible] drifting on Bull's Ledge. She saw her plight, and arrived just as the crew were preparing to take to their boats.

HEARST OFFER IS PRAISED

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The first aviator who flies from ocean to ocean will receive the princely prize of $50,000 offered personally by William Randolph Hearst, in addition to this purse. The successful contestant will in all likelihood receive another $50,000, making his total winnings $100,000. It will also be arranged that all contestants who make a flight of reasonable distance will receive cash prizes as a reward for their courageous efforts. These prizes are being arranged under the personal direction of Mr. Hearst.

Negotiations have been begun with the Governors of every State likely to be traversed by the aviators who attempt the flight. Arrangements are also under way to obtain cash prize offerings from municipalities, boards of trade and other organizations in the communities which lie along the various routes of flight. A certain proportion of these prizes will be set aside for the contestant who makes the entire flight, providing he lands or passes over the State and community offering the prize. While the remainder will be distributed among the aviators who land while en route or who make a specific point their first landing place.

In addition to these general prizes, many cities are arranging local meets to be par-

HUGHES SWORN IN ON SUPREME COURT BENCH

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—After a recess of more than four months with Associate Justice Harlan acting as chief justice, the Supreme Court of the United States at noon to-day met for the Fall term. Out of respect to the memory of the late Chief Justice Fuller, the court adjourned eighteen minutes after it had been called to order.

The only action taken in the court during the brief session was the administering of the oath to former Governor Charles E. Hughes of New York, who was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Associate Justice Brewer.

Immediately upon the opening of the court Justice Harlan announced Governor Hughes's appointment and directed the clerk to read his commission which was duly signed by the President. Standing on the platform at the extreme left of the bench, Mr. Hughes, with his right hand on the Bible, repeated in clear tones the judicial oath, at the conclusion of which he pressed the Bible to his lips.

He was then escorted to his seat, which is at the extreme left of the bench. Justice Harlan in adjourning the court paid a tribute to the memory of Chief Justice Fuller. The court room was crowded with a distinguished assemblage, principally members of the bar.

Prominent among the labor cases to be heard and passed upon by the court on this term are the so-called Gompers contempt case, the employers' liability law case, the safety appliance law, the hours of service law cases, the peonage cases, the importation cases, and the Arkansas "full crew act" cases.

The Gompers-Mitchell-Morrison contempt case involves matters fundamental in the conflict between laborers and capitalists, and either from the labor standpoint concerning primary rights of free speech and freedom of the press; or, from that of capitalists as concerning primary rights of ownership and freedom in the conduct of private business. Also it concerns the rights of the citizen, to which injunctive courts in labor disputes may be disregarded with impunity.

An effort will be made during the term to have the court declare unconstitutional the employers' liability law passed by congress in 1908. Labor fell it had suffered a great blow when the law was passed when the Supreme Court nullified the employers' liability act of 1906.

FIND BANKER'S BODY AFLOAT IN SOUND

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Floating in Long Island Sound, off Fort Schuyler, the body of George de Malcom, board member of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Malcom & Combs, was found. The fear of his friends that he ended his life by jumping from a Fall River boat were thus borne out. The Malcom family attributes the suicide to grief over the death of his son William Shelby Malcom, twelve, who died last June on a Fall River boat on the way to the Malcom Summer home at Hyannisport, Mass.

PRESSURE ON HAMLIN TO ACCEPT

When the members of the Democratic State Convention Committee of Four get together informally this afternoon they decided to meet at 1 o'clock at a hotel agreed upon, to again take up the matter of getting a gubernatorial candidate.

It has been pointed out to members of the committee that if Charles S. Hamlin is the nominee, as it was agreed upon Saturday, and told exclusively in yesterday's BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, the committee will have gone a long way toward repairing the damage done to their chances at the riotous Faneuil Hall convention.

Colonel William A. Gaston issued a statement today in which he declared that under no circumstances would he accept the nomination even if the committee offered it to him.

The four members of the committee who have the matter in hand are Former Senator William F. Hayes of Springfield; Mayor Robert J. Crowley of Lowell; Fred I. Stanton, chairman of the Democratic State Committee; and Joseph A. Maynard, chairman of the Democratic City Committee.

Candidate to Fit Platform.

"You may rest assured," said one of the committee, "that the head of the ticket will be a man who will fit the platform adopted and that you'll see the Democratic party a great fighting force in this State this Fall."

Hamlin was still out fishing in Buzzards Bay when the Democratic leaders tried to get in touch with him early to-day. It was expected back some time to-day, those in Matunpadett said. The chief work on the part of leading Democrats outside of the Committee of Four to-day seemed to be to get Hamlin to agree to take the nomination. Fear that he may not accept it is what gives the greatest concern to leaders.

There was still talk, too, of Valley or

AMERICAN MINES IN HONDURAS SEIZED

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 10.—Honduras have taken possession of American interests upon the west coast of Honduras near Amapala, according to private telegrams received in this city to-day. Soldiers under the command of commandant Maisel, of the Amapala barracks, the radical anti-foreign leader, have seized American mines and ships off the harbor. The other foremen have sent rings to the United States gunboat Princeton, at Amapala, which is expected that marines be landed. One report from Honduras to-day said that followers of the Amapala commandant had attacked the United States consul.

PRETTY BROOKLYN 'MAN HATER,' WON BY CHELSEA MAN

ROSE GOLD.

BLUSHING MAN HATER, WOOED, WON IN WEEK, BROKE 'NO-WED' OATH

Miss Rosie Gold, the implacable man-hating President of the Bachelor Girls' Club of Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, is engaged to be Joseph Halpirn of Chelsea and Tufts Dental School, after one brief week of acquaintance.

Miss Rosie is a sweet conflict of emotions to-day. She is head over heels in love with Dr. Halpirn, just as he is with her.

"I used to think all men were vain, insincere and selfish," she said to-day. Then she sighed: "But I never knew till this week that there was such a man as Dr. Halpirn."

But Miss Rosie shrinks from telling her outraged fellow members of the Girls' Bachelor Club of Bay Ridge—her sisters, too. Some of them are members.

"They are not quite ready to go back home and see their girls."

She's going to face them. Furthermore, she's going to tell them to do just what she has done—be married, now, right away, that she is in grave danger of being deposed for breach of trust and generally infidelity to the sacred cause of old maidhood.

Cupid Wins in Less Than Week.

To make it all the worse, it took less than a week to make the president of the club an engaged girl. Miss Rosie admits that it's "pretty bad."

Eight days, Mrs. Myer Golob, Miss Rosie's hostess at No. 201 Chestnut street, Chelsea, declares any guilt as matchmaker. She only did her duty as a hostess in arranging a party for the president of the Girls' Bachelor Club. She never suspected that her guest would surrender so abjectly to Dr. Cupid. But the scalping scalpe of over a score of other courtships fell at the feet of Victor Love.

Miss Rosie Gold is twenty-three years old. She is the daughter of Abraham Gold, a retired real estate operator of Bay Ridge. Up to a week ago she was a man hater of most virulent type. Then came along she came to the sage conclusion that men are after no good. She formed herself and recently five other girls into the Girls' Bachelor Club of Bay Ridge. Its motto was "Self-support and anti-matrimony." The club held its purpose intact up to now. The fair president, the leader of the three band, is the first to desert to the altar.

One week ago Miss Rosie came to Chelsea to visit her friend, Mrs. Sarah Golob, who is also the wife of a cousin of Dr. Myer Golob of No. 201 Chestnut street, Chelsea. She expected a good time from Mrs. Golob than her anti-man views were to be respected.

Who's Blushing Now.

"Rosie can't blame me," said Mrs. Golob, to-day, with a triumphant smile at her blushing guest. "I never said a word. It's all her own doing."

Among those invited was Dr. Golob's friend, Dr. Joseph Halpirn. Dr. Golob is an M. D. Dr. Halpirn is a D. D. S. He has taken his dentistry degree and has an office at No. 105 Chestnut street, Chelsea, not far from the Golob house. He is also taking a special advanced course in dentistry at Tufts Dental School.

At the party Dr. Halpirn was presented to Miss Rosie. It is plain that the president of the Bachelor Girls' Club of Bay Ridge was from that moment, as it began for her honorable office. Miss Rosie herself says:

"I always thought men were too vain, selfish and insincere. I used to think that [illegible] when a man made love to you, he was [illegible] in love with himself. But now—"

Attitude of high color.

"Yes," she was asked, "but now?"

"Well, now I know better. I do and I think all men are that way at least I know one who isn't. Yes, I know he is—anyhow I never knew there was such a man as Dr. Halpirn on earth."

To Tell Them to Do Likewise.

When she answered the ring at the Golob door to-day Miss Gold was naturally bashful. She admitted:

"Yes, I am Miss Rose Gold of Bay Ridge, Brooklyn."

Asked if she was engaged to Dr. Halpirn, she said:

"Well, what of it? What difference does it make?"

"Well," she was asked, "were you the Miss Rose Gold who organized and is president of the Girls' Bachelor Club?"

"Then are you ready to go back home and see those girls?"

"No, I am not. I'm going to stay right here. I'm going to tell them to do just what she has done—be married, now, right away, that she is in grave danger of being deposed for breach of trust and generally infidelity to the sacred cause of old maidhood."

"I'll just tell them to follow suit. I'm sure I'll be much happier. I do rather hate to return home. Some of my sisters are members of the club, you know. They will be surprised. And I am the president and the very first one to become engaged. Why, I was known as a maid-hater."

The time of marriage was mentioned. Miss Rosie promptly blushed again.

"I am thinking of it," she said in the near future. "Oh, no, no home in Bay Ridge, of course. What will your mother say? Well, they know it now. I wrote to them. I have had received a letter. They know I am old enough to know my own affairs. I don't know what is in the letter from home. But it's all right. I am going home in a week. I only came here to stay a fortnight."

Miss Rosie is wearing now a big diamond solitaire on her engagement finger, sparkling token of the amazing results of a brief visit to Chelsea.

NO CHOLERA ON SANNIO.

Arriving from the cholera districts of Italy, the Italian steamship Sannio, Captain Dodero, reached her berth at the Cunard line docks in East Boston with a clean bill of health. The closest kind of an examination was given the passengers and the ship by the physicians, and after being held up at quarantine for more than half an hour the steamer was ordered to continue on her passage to the dock.

SIX TOWNS DESTROYED BY FLAMES

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 10.—The fear is growing this afternoon that 1,000 or more lives have been lost in the great forest fires which have wiped out half a dozen small towns and villages in Northern Minnesota and Southern Ontario. It was reported that 5,000 persons, 3,000 of them refugees were trapped in Rainy River, and that many of these perished when the flames swept over the town. Almost 100 square miles of territory this afternoon was girdled and swept by walls of flame.

FIRE WIPES OUT SEVERAL TOWNS.

Beaudette, Pitt, Greenton, Spooner, Williams and Rosewood are all known to be wiped out. Warroad is also surrounded by flames. A detachment of the Winnipeg fire brigade is there and with the assistance of the townsmen it is believed the place will be saved. The tales which came from the scenes of the disaster are sickening in their horror. Many are the tales of heroism which are told.

A terrific fire is raging about eight miles east of Whitemouth, on the line of the Canadian Northern railway and travelling westward at a rapid rate on the strong southeast wind which is making the temperature of the city very high. A few scores miles further east, near the village of Lowette, the homes of two settlers have been destroyed and the people had to flee for their lives and leave everything. There is a vast of prairie fire extending eight miles across the country at that point.

Troops Fight Flames.

Canadian Pacific officials were sent into the fire zone to help fight the fire. Governor Eberhardt ordered out two companies of militia to assist the firefighters and help in the rescue work.

Along the banks of the Rainy River a roaring trail of fire swept through the dried out forests. The long drought made the wood as dry as tinder, and there was apparently no human means by which the flames could be checked.

All through the night the wind blew a gale and blazing embers, carried great distances, started new fires. The suffering in the fire zone could not be exaggerated. The glare of black smoke darker than the clouds of a midsummer storm, hung low over the stricken area. Fifty bodies had been found in the vicinity of Rainy River before the fire drove the fighters from the field.

Refugees from the settlements tell harrowing tales of disaster and adventure today. Panic reigned in Baudette, and men and women fled in mad haste from their homes. Many sought for the refugees has been traced as far as Loman in the vicinity of Rainy River, so great is the velocity of the wind that human power was powerless. Some instances burning sticks were carried for a quarter of a mile. So intense was the heat that steam arose from the surface of Rainy River at points. Settlers who fled into the water for safety say that the air was filled by them of the sound and perished in the flames.

It was reported today that the Minnesota town of Warroad had been destroyed. Late last night Warroad was surrounded by a seething sea of fire. Nothing has been heard an

Many Bodies Burned.

The towns of Swift, Cedar Spur and Williams were reported in great danger from the fire, and residents were fleeing from the communities in danger.

The Canadian Northern Railway placed trains at the disposal of the people and [illegible] to [illegible] refugees. The Canadian Northern Railway placed trains at the disposal of the people and [illegible] to [illegible] refugees. Many of the people were taken to Winnipeg, and Regina were placed at the disposal of the refugees. When the fire first started to burn there were 1,500 refugees there from Spooner and Baudette. The panic seized the fleeing people, panic reigned and many drowned from failing to reach a point of points of safety. Women fainted in the streets of Rainy River and men, worn out with fatigue of fighting, the encroaching fire were unable longer to continue the battle.

Later reports announced that Spooner, two miles from Rainy River, Ontario, was destroyed.

Firefighting apparatus has been sent from this city, Duluth, Fort William and Port Arthur.

Many of the dead were completely incinerated by the flames and the number of the fatalities may likely never be known.

FOUR YEARS FOR FORGER.

John Bagley, alias John Knightley, who was wanted in Boston for forgeries amounting to $5,000, has been sentenced to four years in the Toronto penitentiary, according to a letter received by Deputy Superintendent Watts to-day. Bagley was arrested on a similar complaint in Toronto.

SEEK C. S. HAMLIN'S CONSENT TO ACCEPT PARTY NOMINATION

Foss, for first place, but it was only talked. Vahey has taken himself out of the running, and Foss is said to be in accord with the efforts of business men and men who have the parties interests at heart, to get Hamlin to accept the nomination.

Uncertainty as to the power of the committee of Foss to name a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor is set aside in a statement from Chairman John F. Moors of the Boston Election Commission, that the Committee has that power. The Morton statement follows:

"In view of the confusion almost everywhere relative to nominations and withdrawals, the following may be of interest:

"Certificates of nomination for candidates to be filed by all the men of the Commonwealth must be filed on or before Oct. 10, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. This applies to certificates of candidates for offices nominated by the parties at their State convention.

"Independent nomination papers for the same to be filed on or before October 25, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

"Certificates of withdrawal from the same must be filed on or before October 20 at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Certificates to fill vacancies to the same must be filed on or before October 24 at the same hour.

Withdrawals and Vacancies.

"According to the practice of the office of the Secretary of State, a withdrawal will be received after the certificate of nomination is filed and on the day up to October 20 at 5 p. m., although the statutes provide it shall be filed within seventy-two working hours after October 13.

"Also according to the practice of the secretary's office, a certificate to fill the vacancy will be received at any time after the filing of the withdrawal up to October 24 at 5, although the statutes provide that such certificate shall be filed within 72 working hours after October 20, 1910.

"In order to convince any question dispute as to certificates could be made, the first act filed immediately after the withdrawal and the substitution, and also one not within the time provided by section two of chapter 181 of the election laws.

"In regard to the question whether the State Committee could delegate to a committee the power to act in its stead, in nominating a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, would say that this method was followed in Boston for several years in nominating candidates for municipal committees, by a committee designated by the city convention to act in its stead.

"After a meeting held by the Boston ballot commissioners, Justice Foster presiding, this method of nomination was declared valid on October 1, 1909. George W. Anderson appeared for the objector and Joseph J. Corbett appeared for the certificate."

Foss Proposed for Senator.

The disgruntled Republican, in confirming the exclusive story in yesterday's issue of the American about the decision to support Foss for Governor, declared that Foss could be persuaded to accept running mate under the Democratic banner, if not well enough acts in accordance with the wishes of the Democratic leaders. Foss will have found himself out of their difficulties. Vahey and Foss will take the stump and do all they can to advance the Democratic cause.

There are many who would like to have Mr. Foss' name second place, but this he absolutely refuses and it could scarcely be expected to do. It will remain for him to select a suitable running mate for Mr. Hamlin.

Eugene N. Foss would be left as the logical man to run against Senator Lodge, whose views regarding the tariff Mr. Foss does not altogether agree with, so long as possible, would the plucky men so lately projected to the front, thus enabling the democrats to present during a strong campaign. The possibility of the above combination might cause trouble, but it also spreads appealing to party leaders of all sorts and degrees and looks for success in every class. The Boston democrats will be under the leadership of Foss showing as well as ever their loyalty.

POLICE IN SEARCH FOR HOLDUP GANG

Scores of special policemen and blue coaters were on the firing line a band of things, footpads, housebreakers and hold-up men, who are declared to be responsible for a long list of robberies and hold-ups that have taken place in Boston during the past two weeks. The search for this band of desperate characters does not include the members of the gang who are now in jail awaiting trial for holding up and robbing the manager of Whalen's restaurant, 1151 Columbus avenue, South End, at the point of a revolver, but are all those who have taken part in the recent hold-ups in this city.

The above was in the course of a sermon on the Second Commandment and its Relation to Modern Life." In which the preacher declared that democracy is now the watchword of the world and that all the kings are trembling in their boots as a result.

STATE LABOR DELEGATES IN CONVENTION

WORCESTER, Oct. 10.—Thomas J. Durnin, president of the Massachusetts Branch of the American Federation of Labor, in his address to the 175 delegates who assembled at the twenty-fifth annual meeting, at Hibernian Hall, to-day, called upon the trade unionists of the State to defeat Eben S. Draper, Republican candidate for Governor this Fall, because of his hostility to labor as shown in his action on the eight hour bill.

In 1909, said President Durnin, the right hour bill met with the veto of Governor Eben S. Draper, and after the magnificent rally of labor in 1909, we are up again the Governor of the Commonwealth vetoing the eight hour bill, which is a bill of the people, and no one man should stand in the way of not giving the right to the referendum, which was accepted and given to the people, an eight hour law.

Power in Hands of Labor.

If the trade unionists of Massachusetts are loyal to the cause of labor, and not to party politics, said he, we will bring about the defeat of the man who so boldly boasts of his veto of this bill of legislation which says that eight hours shall constitute a day's work.

"This entire matter is now in the hands of organized labor of this State. The question of the area will speak for themselves. Are they going to be loyal to the cause of trade unionism or are they going to be loyal to their party affiliations? I trust that the people of this Commonwealth will show their interest and fairness to the cause, to the betterment of their homes, and that I have no apprehension in regard to this.

"We should be free from all political parties and all political affiliations and we should continue to do the work of defeating men who hold public office in our State, county or town, who fight and oppose the interests of the working people.

Must Defeat Enemies.

We must defeat our enemies and loyally support our friends. Our enemies friends, and I trust that organized labor will continue with its fight until the men who are sent to the smallest or highest office in our State are free from all obligations of money power.

"I trust that any action taken at this convention will keep our organization clear, as it always has been, of any political party, and that it will continue in the great work of bringing about the defeat of men who are hostile to our rights in Congress and our labor legislation in this State.

"I hope that our Central Labor Unions will see that the men who are elected to Congress are friends of labor, and as far as possible, bring like trade unionists who are loyal to the cause of labor and are ever ready to fight for the rights of labor when they endeavoring to bring about success.

Seek Only Rights.

"I feel that the Central Labor Unions should have a standing committee on legislation, so that the executive board would be able to call them together at short notice, and this would stop the unpleasantness, and perhaps the interference of some who never consult lay matters before the proper authorities, representing your organization.

"We have need for years to try to get the right to work, the right to strike, the right to spend the money of organized labor as we have fought for the right to walk the public streets of the Commonwealth in the time of strike, and if the constitution of this country means freedom, why should not the trade unionist have it in peace as well as in the time of strife?

"These important subjects need strong action to do away with the interference of the judicial mind of the Commonwealth with its interpretation of the law, which in some cases says we don't have the right to the muscles of organized labor, and in other cases cites that we have no right to use the funds of our organization, and legally pay wages to men who may refuse to work in order to shorten the hours of labor, or bring about the increase of wages, so that their homes may be made happier. And further the great question that is so often discussed, to keep our children from the work shops, the mills and the department stores, and give them the best education possible, so that the workingman's child may not be forced to work long hours for small wages in order to maintain their homes."

Denounces Open Shop.

President Durnin said that reports received by him during the year showed that wages had been raised from 5 to 15 per cent., but that the increase had not kept step with the increased cost of living. He denounced the open shop. He denied that he ever tried to defeat the fifty-four hour bill of the textile workers. He advocated the creation of a Department of Labor in the State. He asked that the farmers be allowed to send a delegate to the next convention.

The convention opened at 10 o'clock. Addresses of welcome were made by Mayor James Logan of this city, and by Charles A. Cullen, president of the Worcester Central Labor Union.

In his report Dennis J. Driscoll, secretary-treasurer, in discussing the license question, said:

"Prohibition does not prohibit. What we want is the full enforcement by the people in charge of the license question in the Commonwealth."

He said that the wage-earners should take up "The Drunk Law." He said that the prohibition system should be lengthened.

EXTENSION COURSES AT BROWN INCREASED

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 10—The extension courses at Brown University will begin the last day of this month and, it is stated, by President Faunce, will cover a much enlarged field. Nine subjects are offered and the lectures are to be given in each course by members of the faculty. The courses are "American Literature," Prof. Bronson; "Moral Values," Prof. Everett; "The Civil War," Prof. MacDonald; "Past and Present England," Prof. Kenneson; "Early English Novel," Prof. Huntington; "German," Prof. Van Kleuze; "French," M. Gilbert Chinard; "Evolution of Modern Music," Prof. MacDougall; "Conservation of Life and Health," Prof. Mead, Gorham, Walter and Dr. Mitchell.

DARING ESCAPE FROM MALDEN PRISON WAGON

James E. Sullivan, better known as "Spike" Sullivan, of Malden, escaped from the prison van which took him from the East Cambridge jail to the Malden court today, just as the van had backed to the Courthouse door. Sullivan dashed up Linden street. Probation Officer Allison fired four shots after him, but he paid no attention to a little thing like that. At Washington and Linden streets a crowd attempted to head off the fugitive, but he dashed between two horses and was lost. Twenty Malden officers in autos and bicycles now in pursuit.

Sullivan was in jail, failing to give $1,000 bail fixed after his arraignment on a charge of highway robbery October 8th. At that time, it was said, he stole $2,000 in a pocketbook from Mrs. James S. Gray of Malden, on the Malden boulevard.

POLICE LOOKING FOR TWO OF SUSPECTS

The Brookline police are to-day looking for three well-dressed young men who visited several stores in the vicinity of Harvard Square on Saturday night. The police do not know whether they were bent on robbery or going through a college initiation escapade. The first place visited was the news store of William D. Paine. One of the young men engaged a woman clerk in conversation while the other two walked to the back of the store and opened a door leading to the cellar. When the clerk detected they made an excuse that they were going to Beverly station. The passage was a broken wheel and an automobile containing supplies rushed to the city.

McCurdy and Willard, who were to have started in the race, made a technical start getting up into the air for a few minutes and then alighting. The planes were taken down preparatory to being shipped to Buffalo and Albany to be used to repair the machine.

ANOTHER FALSE ALARM AT YOUNG'S

For the second time in ten days, members of the downtown fire companies have been called to Young's Hotel on a false alarm. For another companies with several ladders and a battery of chiefs arrived, only to find no fire. All the boxes were examined and found to be intact. The firemen believe the wires became crossed or somebody turned in a box upon and crossed them intentionally.

ARMY MEN FINISH NINETY-MILE RIDE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—With Major General Leonard Wood at their head thirty-two wet and very muddy army officers have just completed a ninety-mile ride, completed successfully the ninety-mile riding test by which they are supposed to show their fitness for promotion. Not one of the None appeared to be any the worse for wear and not some did not show up mounted ability in dismounting.

HOAR RALLY TO-NIGHT.

Roger Sherman Hoar, candidate for the State Senate in the Fifth Middlesex District, will hold a rally in Concord town hall this evening. Other speakers will be Ira J. Mitchell of Marlboro, candidate for Congress; Charles F. McCarthy of the city and Professor Eugene Wambaugh of the Harvard Law School.

PAPAL LEGATE LAUDS CATHOLICS OF BOSTON FOR THEIR FAITH

I have enjoyed my visit to Boston very much. The archdiocese of Boston is known throughout the Catholic world as one of the most progressive and prosperous in any land. The manifestations of loyalty and faith which are constantly being shown make evident the deep faith of its people. It has been a real pleasure for me to come here and meet again Mgr. O'Connell, whom I have known for many years. Of your city I carry away most pleasant recollections, and I should have been overjoyed had I more time to remain here. Cardinal Vannutelli is farewell to Boston.

ELY SMASHES MACHINE ON SECOND START

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Eugene Ely's aeroplane was demolished and the aviator was injured when the machine fell with him from a height of 150 feet near Gresham today. Ely had resumed his Chicago-New York flight, following an accident Sunday. An automobile dragged the aeroplane to a blacksmith shop in Gresham for repairs.

Ely was only slightly hurt and announced that he expected to have his machine in working order to resume the trip within a few hours. A corps of mechanics from the Hawthorne track, who have been here with the Curtiss machine for the last week, were hastened to the Gresham blacksmith shop to aid in the repair work. At least twenty-four of the 105 hours allowed for the trip will have been lost, but the aviator maintains he will reach New York within the scheduled time.

Ely declared, as he started to-day, that he expected to reach South Bend in three or four hours. Several thousand persons were on hand for the start.

The start yesterday was made from the Hawthorne race track, where several aviators have been making tests for a week. Ely got away at 4:12 in the afternoon, apparently ready for a perfect trip.

The special train, however, which was to accompany him, had hardly pulled out of the station, when a telegram announced that Ely was down at Beverly station. The passage was a broken wheel and an automobile containing supplies rushed to the city.

McCurdy and Willard, who were to have started in the race, made a technical start getting up into the air for a few minutes and then alighting. The planes were taken down preparatory to being shipped to Buffalo and Albany to be used to repair Ely's machine.

FAXON COMING TO FACE CHARGES HERE

Harold B. Faxon, who is under arrest at Goldfield, Nev., on the charge of having embezzled $15,000 of the People's National Bank in 1905, will return to this city without requisition. Faxon is said to have confessed the embezzlement to United States Marshal Humphreys and to have said he spent the money in stock raising. He has been living in Goldfield under the name of "Jack Morgan" and working as a miner. Two years ago he was married, being divorced recently.

RICE CASE SUSPECTS HELD AS FUGITIVES

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Pietro Tomassello and Josephine Frusciano, who are suspected in connection with the murder of William L. Rice, the Cleveland millionaire, were arraigned before Magistrate Tighe in Brooklyn to-day and held in bonds of $3,000 each as fugitives from justice. Magistrate Tighe did not hold them as Rice murder suspects, but the Frusciano woman is wanted on a charge of robbing department stores in Cleveland and Tomasello on a charge of holding up and robbing a woman.

BROKER ARNOLD GETS HEARING IN COURT TO-DAY

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 10.—Ernest M. Arnold of Putnam, Ct., appears in the United States District Court at Hartford to-day to show cause why he should not be adjudged bankrupt on the complaint of creditors to whom it is alleged he owes $600,000. This fortune represents, it is declared, the prospective stock market and real estate winnings of 300 residents of Putnam, Danielson and New Britain, Ct., Whitinsville, Mass., and other cities and towns in southern New England. The whole story describes the gradually expanding of a get-rich-quick bubble which has engulfed many of the out the curt phrase of one investor. Arnold is quoted as saying:

Wanted Fair Deal.

"I want a fair deal. If I have committed a crime, then every banker and broker has done so. I never promised an investor over six per cent. If they received more, it was because of fortunate investments. Money I paid out did not make sins, great friends on my capital. The trouble now is due to my giving Clinton S. Arnold of Greenwich, Conn., mortgage for $22,000 to be put into this business." Arnold is but twenty-five years old, and was a millworker. He saved money and sent it to Charles Hughes, Lacey & Co., New York stock brokers, to be invested. He made about $5,000. He opened a branch office in Putnam for Douglass, Lacey & Co. He did a land office business.

He would give his customers long-time notes in return for money they gave him to invest. The customers made big dividends, as high as fifty per cent. in some cases. Profits boomed, and the notes were up. Arnold was invited into the First Methodist church. Being an expert accountant, he was made church treasurer. There is no charge that the church accounts are not straight as a die.

Note Makes Trouble.

Arnold opened branch offices in Keene, N. H., and Whitinsville. He enlarged his Putnam offices and hired a bookkeeper and stenographer. Customers let their winnings stay in Arnold's hands to accumulate. Arnold bought an automobile. Some of his customers did, too.

In July, a Massachusetts creditor suggested for collection a big note. Then trouble ensued. Creditors demanded their money immediately. Finally, six creditors secured counsel this week. It resulted in Arnold being ordered to court to-day.

SCHOONER COMES IN WITH BROKEN MAST

Minus hair her mainmast, as a result of a squall on Georges Bank last Friday night, the schooner Lizzie Colpitts Friday night the schooner was crossing Georges. There was a strong westerly gale, and high seas were running. Only the helmsman and lookout were onboard. A sudden squall struck them, and the main mast snapped off just at the crossyes. The broken piece in a tangle falling to the deck.

GIRL WORKERS START BIG NECKTIE STRIKE

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The threatened strike of the necktie workers of this city, which, it has been declared, will affect between 17,000 and 20,000 girls, began today when 6,000 girls employed in the factories on the east side quit work. At a meeting held in the afternoon at Clinton Hall, No. 151 Clinton street, it was expected that orders would be issued to every trade union in the city to join the strikers' ranks.

KING MANUEL'S OWN ACCOUNT OF HOW HE LOST HIS THRONE

GIBRALTAR, Oct. 10.—Following is King Manuel's own graphic account told to-day, of the revolution which led to his deposition as ruler of Portugal:

"I am an outcast to-day because of the plots of political enemies. I have been criticised for not fighting for my throne, but I am discouraged.

"I had no fear of personal danger and would gladly have sacrificed even my life for my country. But when I found that there were plots on all hands, and that those I supposed to be my best friends, were secretly aiding the conspirators, I lost heart. Physically, I was strong enough, but morally I was too weak—too disheartened to fight these many intrigues. So I fled.

"The thing I feel most keenly is that I have been driven from my own country. If Parliament had decreed that a Republic should be established I would not have stood in the way. But the people did not want a Republic. They were opposed to having the monarchy destroyed. They may accept the Republic forced upon them rather than have any more bloodshed, but it will be against their will.

"As for myself I have no worries about the future. I have youth and health and those two things are all that any man should ask."

Manuel, his mother and grandmother, the ex-queen and the ex-dowager, have taken up quarters in the Governor's house here as the guests of Sir Archibald Hunter. The deposed King's sentries and guards at this mansion have been doubled to insure the safety of the exiles.

It was persistently rumored to-day that Manuel and the Queen-mother would go to England this week, instead of to Spain. There was no confirmation of this report, however. Manuel is dejected and depressed. He is excessively nervous and it is evident that he broods deeply over events in his native land.

TAPPED 8 TIMES

The following report in an extreme case of chronic Bright's Disease will interest physicians due to the fact that tapping has heretofore invariably attended fatal termination. Under the new excellent treatment tapping does not prevent recovery.

Patient—six years old—the young son of A. O. Dean, of 1720 Ninth Ave., Oakland, Cal.

Chronic Bright's. Dropsy that had resisted all efforts was continually increasing. The family physician gave no hope and said the end was near.

At this critical moment the treatment was changed to Fulton's Renal Compound, the physician aiding it by holding up the child's head strengthening the little patient against collapse.

Case very stubborn—dropsy was so oppressive that the patient had to be tapped eight times. But as the tapping became further apart the albumen began to decline, dropsy increased, and the patient made a slow but steady recovery, and is now going to the public school in Oakland.

The new excellent treatment for Bright's and chronic kidney disease (Fulton's Renal Compound) shows an efficiency in about 87 per cent of these hitherto incurable and fatal diseases. It can be had in Boston at Riker-Jackson Drug Co., 50 Washington st.

We desire to hear from and advise with patients not noting improvement by the third week. Literature mailed free. John J. Fulton Co., 645 Battery St., San Francisco, Cal. We invite correspondence with physicians who have obstinate cases.

YOUNG TURKS' LEADER WINS PRINCESS BRIDE

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Telegram from Constantinople announces the marriage of Enver Bey, leader of the Young Turks in the overthrow of the old regime last April and who set on the throne the present ruler. His bride, an Egyptian princess, is described as beautiful and accomplished and just seventeen. It is said her hand was bestowed as a reward for his services in accordance with an ancient Turkish royal custom.

POWERS READY TO RECOGNIZE NEW REPUBLIC

PARIS, Oct. 10.—It is stated upon high semi-official authority this afternoon that the French government will announce its recognition of the republic of Portugal within a few hours, and that England's recognition will follow soon after.

These important steps are declared to have resulted from direct advice from King Manuel to-day to the effect that he has abandoned all idea of struggling against the new republic.

The United States cruiser Des Moines and the British cruiser Venus arrived at Lisbon to-day.

Arrests of disguised and fleeing reactionists continued to-day at the Portuguese capital. The discovery of secret subterranean tunnels at the monasteries also fed rumors that many monks were still hiding underground, awaiting a favorable opportunity to emerge and continue the fight against the new regime.

To satisfy the crowd the military initiated enlistment explosions, and in one instance went so far as to dig a trench to locate the suspected mines.

As was the case at the time of the Barcelona riots, the popular feeling seems to be restricted to the monks and nuns, and does not manifest itself toward the secular clergy.

Lisbon in Festival Garb.

With doubtful expediency, the ladies of Professor Bombarda and Admiral Reis, the revolutionary leaders, exposed at the city hall. The Republican flag hangs from the baskets, between which a bust typifying the Republic is draped in black.

Throughout Sunday the city was in festival garb. Thousands came in from the country districts and rifled the scenes of the recent fighting. They wore medals in the form of republican emblems and carried improvised republican flags.

The bands played the republican hymn and the artillery fired salvos in honor of the members of the military and other leaders of the revolutionary committee, who drove from place to place amid the cheers of the populace.

More than a score of those have been wounded, some of them fatally, and it is reported that several have been killed in the storming of Catholic convents in Portugal by Liberal mobs of Republicans and anti-clericals. More than 400 nuns, herded together like sheep and guarded by Republican soldiers are held in Lisbon to-day to be transported out of the country.

News Rigidly Censored.

The most rigid censorship over news relating to the anti-religious movement in Portugal is being exercised by the new Republican provisional government.

Diplomatic circles were stirred to-day by a sensational rumor that Germany was heading a secret inter-continental league to strip Portugal of her biggest and wealthiest colonial possession, Mozambique, in East Africa. Mozambique is not an island and is larger than Portugal; it is rich in natural resources and a strategic point upon the eastern African coast.

CHAMPION ATHLETE TO BE CLERGYMAN

LONG BEACH, Cal., Oct. 10.—Frederick Thompson, who won the title of world's all-round athlete from Martin Sheridan of the Irish American Club of New York city at Chicago the past Summer, has stated that he has decided to become a minister of the gospel, and accepted the directorship of the local Y. DRIVER BADLY HURT.

Timothy J. Murphy, forty-two years old, married, living at No. 452 Seventh street, South Boston, a driver for the Boston Coal Company, was badly injured to-day when his team was struck by a Washington street car and he was thrown from the seat. He was taken to the City Hospital, suffering from a number of internal injuries and a badly sprained back.

MILL MEN DEMAND FACTS ON ARKWRIGHT CLUB POLITICAL FUND

Walter H. Langshaw, president and manager of the Dartmouth and Bristol mills in New Bedford, in a statement just made public, demands to know what was done with the $25,000 or more collected from manufacturing corporations by "the Arkwright Club coterie" for "diffusing correct information in regard to the tariff."

The Langshaw statement is carefully worded, but in speaking about "legislation," it says "no permanent benefit can be accomplished by the use of money in a way which will not bear public scrutiny."

Asked for All Facts.

Langshaw was one of the subscribers to the Arkwright fund. The money, according to Langshaw, passed through the hands of Edward Stanwood of Boston. Edward Stanwood, Jr., is treasurer of the Stone Mine, with offices at No. 141 Milk street.

On September 21 Langshaw wrote to Stanwood, asking for information regarding the amount of money expended and the character of the work done. Stanwood's only answer was to return Langshaw's contribution. The contribution was returned on September 27.

Langshaw sent Stanwood another letter last Wednesday, saying: "The money raised is worth more than would be required for the diffusion of correct information in regard to the tariff."

Statement Not Issued.

The neglect of the Arkwright Club to render a statement and the refusal in this instance, justifies one in believing that the money is used for purposes which are not in accordance with the methods you should prevail. If the money is so used, money would not meet my approval as a cotton manufacturer, who pays taxes, and who is interested. Certainly not the public in general, as if such were the case no better campaign document could be found."

"We enjoy important public questions there is often an honest difference of opinion, and room in consideration legislation, extending in the interests of the working man, etc., should be from an economic standpoint, to the disadvantage of capital, as well as labor, but no permanent benefit can be accomplished by the use of money in a way which will not bear public scrutiny."

IRISH DELEGATES PRAISE BOSTON'S BIG HOME RULE MEETING

John E. Redmond, member of the British Parliament, and one of the envoys to America in the interest of the Irish cause, in company with his colleagues, left Boston this afternoon for New York, declaring that the meeting at Symphony Hall last evening, at which $16,000 was raised for the cause, was one of the most enthusiastic gatherings of the kind he ever attended.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon Mr. Redmond, Joseph Devlin and Daniel Boyle, the three envoys, were entertained at a luncheon and reception given by the Atlantic conference at the Boston Exchange Club.

A. Shuman, president of the Atlantic conference, was in the chair. Among those present were: Governor Draper, Lieutenant Governor Frothingham, Former Governor John D. Long, Mayor Fitzgerald, Congressmen Samuel W. McCall, John W. Weeks and Ernest W. Roberts, President Rothwell of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Professor Charles H. Hamilton of Tufts College, Colonel William A. Gaston, Judge Charles A. Dewey, Ex-Mayor Quincy Shaw, Brigadier General Charles H. Taylor, U. A. Gruder, Frederick J. Stimson, J. H. Fitzpatrick, Melvin O. Adams, John O'Callaghan and Samuel J. Elder.

Praises Generous Boston.

"I am intensely gratified," said Mr. Redmond, "with the success of last night's meeting. In my career as one of the most inspiriting meetings I have ever addressed in this city. Boston always responded most to the Irish cause and to those on the quest for Irish behalf. That gathering in Symphony Hall last evening, magnificent in its numbers and splendid in its generosity, is one more proof that the public opinion of the great American nation is still, as it always has been, in full sympathy with Ireland and her just claims as she was placed there before the world.

"Our mission which began two weeks ago in Buffalo, has been a series of triumphs up to this moment. The people of Philadelphia crowded the Academy of Music to the doors at our meeting there, and in New York Carnegie Music Hall held the most enthusiastic meeting I have ever addressed in the Empire City. His last evening kept up the record.

To Speak in Pittsburg.

"We speak on Wednesday evening in Pittsburg where I am informed the leading citizens of our only the Irish race, but the German and other races, have organized a great meeting. I have nothing but words of heartiest thanks to give the people of Boston and especially to the press of Boston for the splendid and inspiring treatment we have received at their hands.

The Symphony hall meeting was one of the most enthusiastic ever held here under the auspices of the United Irish League. After Mr. Redmond had given an account of his speaking tour as Irish leader in Parliament, subscriptions came so rapidly that Mayor Fitzgerald, who presided, had trouble in reading the list of gifts as fast as they came to the platform. It was for the coming general election, expected next January, when the fate of the House of Lords will be decided, that the contributions were made.

Will Bring Back Message.

"I have been asked whether I will come to America again," said Leader Redmond at the conclusion of his address. "If I live and retain my present position, I surely shall. If not my successor will. If we win this time, as I believe in my heart and soul we will, I'll come back to thank you in the name of the people at home. If we lose, I will come back to ask you to contribute again."

Mayor Fitzgerald was at his happiest. When Joseph Devlin referred to the Mayor of Boston with Irish blood in his veins," the Mayor replied, "Not alone the Mayor, Mr. Devlin, but the president of the Chamber of Commerce, the chairman of our Finance Commission and many other leaders of high positions in the city are men of Irish blood and striking examples of Irish valor and manliness," which brought shouts of laughter.

The meeting was called to order by Augustine J. Daly of Cambridge, president of Boston general branch of the United Irish League.

When Leader Redmond was introduced the audience stood and cheered vigorously. He said in part:

Mr. Redmond's Spech.

"After two years I am again surrounded by faithful friends, the Irish of Boston.

"The moral support of America is one of the greatest assets of our struggle. Boston, the home of culture, the cradle of American liberty, has always been in deepest sympathy with our cause, and I am proud of my welcome here. I believe that it implies that I still possess your confidence and good will, and that the cause of Irish freedom has the sympathy of all citizens of Boston. I wish to return the grateful thanks of Ireland to those citizens of Boston not of our blood for their generosity, and to the press for its consistently great invaluable aid.

"I want to render an account to you of my stewardship for the past two years. I will remember your enthusiasm and generosity on that occasion. I told you then if the parliamentary party received the means to carry on the struggle advances would be made. You did your part nobly. I have come to tell what has been done by us.

"I told you then that the land system which had driven our people by the millions to other lands and had ground out the hearts and souls of those who remained at home had practically ceased to exist and that the days of the land lord, agent and bailiff would soon be over. I repeat tonight that within a very few years Ireland will have 500,000 landowners, each owner of his own part of the country.

"While the land act of 1903 gave the final back to the people it did not solve the problem of congested districts, where has sprung all the agitations of this problem. It would be impossible for the residents of that province to live upon the land they now occupy, even if they had nothing to pay for it.

"As you know, Connaught is fertile, but years ago the landlords of that Western province decided that the raising of bullocks and sheep would be most profitable for them, and so the people were driven from the fertile prairies to the peat bogs.

Movement Under Way.

"Not until the Connaught people are restored to those fertile lands will the western land problem be finally settled. I am happy to tell you that the movement is under way, and that within a few years the face of Ireland will be transformed. In 1909 we forced through an unfriendly Parliament the congested district act, creating a board independent of Dublin Castle and free from government. Among its members are Bishop O'Dwenil of Raphoe, Bishop Mangan of Kerry and John Fitzgibbon, who was here two years ago.

"They have compulsory power in nine counties to acquire fertile land, unlimited imperial credit, loaning rates of interest and easiest terms of repayment. They are at work buying up this rich land and dividing the sons and grandsons of the Connaught men driven off their land to make room for cattle and sheep to their successors' ancient holdings. That is one big thing done since two years ago.

"As your chairman has said, 50,000 mud cabins throughout the rural districts have been given place to as many neat cottages with an acre of land for the farm laborers. Two years ago the money for this work ran out but within three months the party has obtained $5,000,000 more for this purpose from the English treasury and the work has been resumed.

Hold Deciding Voice.

"As the position held by the Irish party in the politics of the empire it is well for me to say little, as you can readily see, but I will say this. We now have the deciding voice as to which of the two great parties shall govern.

"Since I have come to America this time, the London Times has printed stories with such headlines as 'Redmond has gone to get money once more from the Irish servant girls in America' has also editorially suggested the policy of contesting every seat Redmond and do so at each general election. It asks if such a policy would not soon bankrupt the Irish.

"I ask you: Will you help checkmate the London Times?

"Joseph Devlin paid glowing tributes to John O'Callaghan and Mayor Fitzgerald, through whose efforts, he said funds for the working of the last general election, for which the party was entirely unprepared, were raised. He received the assurances that racial and religious animosities between Protestants and Catholics in Ireland have disappeared. Daniel Boyle told of the work being done by the Irish in England and Scotland and of the friendliness now prevailing between the democracies of both countries.

"The Irish party's visit to Washington, at the invitation of Mr. Bryan, will be followed by a visit to Taft. With a few friends they had luncheon at the Shoreham home of A. Shuman, adjoining the White House.

Visit Taft at Beverly.

Mr. Shuman accompanied the envoys to the President's cottage. The party included John Redmond, Mrs. Redmond, John Boyle, Joseph Devlin, Thomas H. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Fitzpatrick, Judge Lind of Halifax, former Attorney-General of Canada, Mrs. Laugher and Carl Dreyfus of Canada. Mrs. Taft's sister, Miss Helen Herron, Mrs. Taft's brother, Charles Herron, Mrs. Taft's sister, The President talked with Messrs. Redmond, Boyle and Devlin about current conditions in Ireland, but received them as British subjects.

WILL LEAD MARCH AND CONCERT AT COLUMBUS DANCE

DANCE IN HONOR OF COLUMBUS

With a dance dedicated to Christopher Columbus and a red, white and blue march as leading features, the annual ball of the Elliot School Graduates Club, in Howe Hall, Huntington avenue, in nineteen evening hall fair to outshine all former successes of the organization. The proceeds will go towards the Summer vacation fund.

The grand march will start at 9 o'clock. It will be headed by Miss Rose Capone and John Scanga, followed by Miss Theresa Cassano and Dominic Fiali, Miss Angelina Zelleccea and Peter Cannaker, followed by twenty-five couples. The young women in the dance will be attired in Spanish costumes. Miss Lucy Wellegs will take part in the concert program.

The officers of the ball will be: John Scanga, chief marshal; assisted by Dominic Fiali, Saverio Dominic, Bruno si Saverio Cassano, Harry Small, Anthony Iannella, John Sebisti, Magnus Lignitino, Harry Venuti, Anthony Amoroso and Dominic Lasenia.

13 MORE 'PEERS' ON 'ULTRA' LIST ALL BOSTONIANS

Here are thirteen more names of Boston fashionables just added to the "American ultra fashionable peerage's" list of eligibles, by the Rev. J. W. de Lyon Nicholls, Governor General of the National Society of Scions of Colonial Cheapness.

Mr. and Mrs. Lotarop Ames, Mr. and Mrs. Amory Hollingsworth, Jr. and Mrs. William Appleton and Miss Susan H. Appleton, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic H. Prince, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer and Mr. and Mrs. Barrard Thayer.

Coincident with this announcement the Rev. Mr. Nicholls praised Boston women and said he liked to see a woman indulged "when she needs it," but not coupled.

The thirteen list included Miss Eleonora Sears, Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Lawrence, Miss Preston Lawrence, Mr. J. DeForest Danielson, Mr. and Mrs. Hollis H. Hunnewell, Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips, Mrs. Brayton, granddaughter of Mrs. Amory, Mr. and Mrs. Lars Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Sturgis.

Secretary of the Navy George von L. Meyer, Mr. Meyer and the Misses Meyer are also listed as ultra fashionable.

Miss Susan H. Appleton, a debutante of Boston's coming season, is a niece of Mrs. George H. Lee Parker, Mrs. Howard Kane. There are few American pedigrees better than that of the Boston Appletons.

Of Mrs. Gardner, Mr. Nicholls says: "It looks as if Mrs. Gardner might ultimately decide to range herself fully in line with the ultra fashionables."

The reason why Mrs. Jack Gardner and Susan H. Appleton, Mrs. David Stewart, parted company before the marriage of the latter was said to be a difference of opinion as to the ownership of certain pieces of furniture and lace, and upon receiving young gentlemen callers either Miss Appleton or Mrs. Gardner stepmother approved."

Of Boston society in general, Mr. Nicholls says: "I am relieved to know that each year it can be said with less truthfulness that Boston women pay more attention to the custom than to the conscience. It is to see a woman painted when she needs it, powdered if she is unwell and not with coarse rouge powder, but with a liquid cosmetic beautifier, which is one of the secrets of the Newport set."

AMESBURY FIGHTS TYPHOID FEVER

AMESBURY, Oct. 10.—Three cases of typhoid fever just discovered in Bridge's block have caused the board of health to take stringent measures to prevent the disease from becoming epidemic. The health authorities have just succeeded in checking a small epidemic of infantile paralysis. Several deaths have occurred in the last three years and the health authorities have declared that they will have Amesbury the cleanest town before snow flies.

COLLAR BAND STRANGLES MAN

HARTFORD, Ct., Oct. 10.—Frank A. Johnson, employed at the Hartford Rubber Works, was found dead in his room with a collar band of the shirt he wore. The circumstances indicating that the man had first fainted and then been strangled by the tightening of the collar band of the shirt he wore. The coroner's jury, after hearing all the evidence, rendered a verdict of accidental death.

MISS GOULD TO SPEND $60,000 ON A POOL

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Miss Helen Gould is to have a private swimming pool at her country seat, Lyndhurst. It will cost about $60,000. The contract has been awarded to an Irvington concern, and it is expected that it will be ready for use by the time she returns to Lyndhurst in the Spring. It is to be located just south of the present conservatory.

BROCKTON MAN ARRESTS HIMSELF

BROCKTON, Oct. 10.—The police here dealt with an unusual prisoner, who arrested himself. The patrol wagon had gone to Aaron Arnes' home to get a prisoner and as it started for the police station Joseph Tamilin jumped in and was arrested by officer Peter Davis. Tamilen refused to leave and was arrested for drunkenness.

HETTY GREEN IS STILL PROUD OF PAST BEAUTY

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt., Oct. 10.—Hetty Green, who confesses to seventy-nine dresses and an income of $16,000 a day, stood on the rickety stone steps of her former home here and for five hours directed a small crew of laborers who removed the battered and weatherbeaten stone posts from the wall in front of the house and securely locked the ancient masonry in a woodshed with other well-guarded fixtures and fetsum of the mansion estate.

"I am seventy-nine years old, and I get tired more quickly than I used to; and I'm growing to look so old that I'm ashamed to have my picture in the newspapers.

Corsets Drive Silvia to Bed.

"To look at me now you would scarcely believe that I was a handsome woman once. I had the most beautiful long eyelashes, and my hair was a golden brown and so long that I could sit on it. My complexion was a short time ago. She wears corsets all day and keeps dressed and by quitting the fitting, and does a lot of entertaining. When she came to see me a while ago in New York city she was so tired that she went to bed and stayed two days.

"Silvia and her husband are living at Cruchley Park in Canada. They have an estate there of 30st acres; they keep twenty servants and 100 horses and nineteen dogs.

"How does it feel to be so rich?" Mrs. Green was asked.

"I don't feel any different from anyone else. I've always worked hard and there is a filling for every one if they only will look for it. My father used to say that if you sat me on a log in the back yard I would find something to do. I'm so active.

"Judge Lied for Three Days."

"You see that little white cloud up there? That cloud puts me in mind of a stained glass window I saw in Trinity church in New York city once when I went in to pray. I was being sued for several thousand dollars, and it looked as if I would lose my case. But I prayed to God that if it was right for me to lose my case to make me reconciled; but I didn't think it was right that I should lose. I told God that I didn't care any one in particular, but only that I needed the money. Well, there were three Supreme Court judges trying the case, and the case, one of the judges died for three days, and the third day I brought him in a lie and I won my case.

"I am a Quaker woman. My father was a Quaker, and brought me up never to speak a word in anger. Sometimes I would not speak for an hour, and sometimes I would not speak for a whole day. As I could not get over my angry mood.

"I believe that one's soul lives after death. You know when Elijah ascended into heaven he didn't take his clothes, and I don't see why I should have mine.

"New York city is filled with cowards; you can tell that by the vote given there.

"I have lived in Hoboken for five years in the same house, and had the same janitor, and I never had a fight with him. I think that is a pretty good recommendation for me.

"What you like in the Texas Hotel at one time?"

That was where I gave the dinner to Blixa and we ate off of gold plates. I had the dog Dewey for three days." There was a catch in Mrs. Green's voice for Dewey has been dead but three days.

RICH CHINESE FETE AMERICAN VISITORS

PEKING, Oct. 10.—American business men representing the United States Chamber of Commerce, have just been banqueted by 100 of the wealthiest Chinese merchants, the fete being the last of a long round of entertainments, which included visits to the palaces of the Forbidden City. The elaborateness and quality of their reception have astounded the Americans. The American minister, Mr. Calhoun, says that such reception of a body of foreigners is unprecedented. The delegates have left for Canton, and will sail for America October 25.

HETTY GREEN DOESN'T LIKE PINK SLIPPERS AND HELPS WIDOWS

I hate to see those lazy women sitting around the hotel, with their soft white hands and with pink satin slippers on their feet which they can't put on the ground. And they die young, too. I believe in an active life. I spend most of my time in the Park Bank, where we employ 240 persons. I own only forty houses. I put the most of my money in mortgages and let other people worry about taxes. I saved seven widows in Chicago from being put out of their homes. Someone was going to foreclose the mortgages, and I bought them up.—Woman hunter's statement while using fence posts.

WELCH RECOVERING.

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 10.—Thomas P. Welch of Adams, who was injured in an automobile accident at Palmer, in which Thomas F. Callahan of Cheshire lost his life, is resting comfortably at the Springfield Hospital. His condition has improved greatly and his physicians say he is almost certain of recovery.

IMMIGRATION SITE OFFERED

Colonel George R. Billings, commissioner of Immigration, and Colonel P. V. Abbott of the United States army engineer's office in this city, today conferred relative to an exchange of sites for the new immigration station provided for under an appropriation by the last congress. The site originally selected—the Jefferies Point Yacht Club site—interferes with the plans for the development of the East Boston water front, so effort is being made to find a new location for the immigration building.

After the conference to-day Colonel Billings said that the new site offered was a location approximately where Simpson's dry dock at Jeffries Point, East Boston, now is. He disapproved of the new location, and said that he did not believe that it could ever be made available. "I believe that it would take all our present appropriation to get the site ready to build on," said Colonel Billings.

The Legland liner Devonian is expected to dock Tuesday. The Allan liner Numidian, is also expected Tuesday morning.

A Modern Miracle

Come to Mechanics Building and See the Evolution of a Shoe

There are some things you owe to yourself.

You felt this way about Niagara Falls and the first aeroplane flight in your neighborhood.

You perhaps waited impatiently till the aviator went up.

Or you traveled a long way to see Niagara.

But they were well worth the time. Now you owe it to yourself to see this series of wonderful machines.

No one thing else in the world requires half so many devices to make an a shoe.

Sixty whirring machines are required. Each one a mechanical marvel with its own special work to do.

This entire series has been installed in Mechanics Building.

Just to show you how the "Goodyear Welt" is made.

We have nothing to sell. Neither stock nor shoes nor anything else.

This is just an educational exhibit. It demonstrates the principal feature in modern shoemaking—

THE "GOODYEAR WELT"

This isn't merely the name of a shoe. But it is the name of a shoe manufacturing method. It means the way of sewing the thick sole, the welt and the upper together. This means in all "Goodyear Welts" is outside the shoe. You can see it running along the outer edge of the sole. Imagine how uncomfortable that seam would be inside the shoe, yet that was the old way of making shoes before the "Goodyear" process was invented. Now practically all shoe manufacturers have this new machinery. And all retail shoe stores sell this "Goodyear Welt"—under different trade names of course. You probably would have difficulty in finding a store that sold shoes other than "Goodyear Welts." Learn what they are—come and see. Then you'll appreciate the shoes you are wearing a good deal more. And you'll see an exhibit that is worth your time. You are invited.

UNITED SHOE MACHINERY COMPANY

The Thing To Remember Is that you can detect the imitation of the "Goodyear Welt" by a "sock" lining. Lift it up at the shank of the shoes. If there are tack points and stitches underneath it, the shoe is not a "Goodyear Welt." If you want the best in construction

Insist on the "Goodyear Welt"

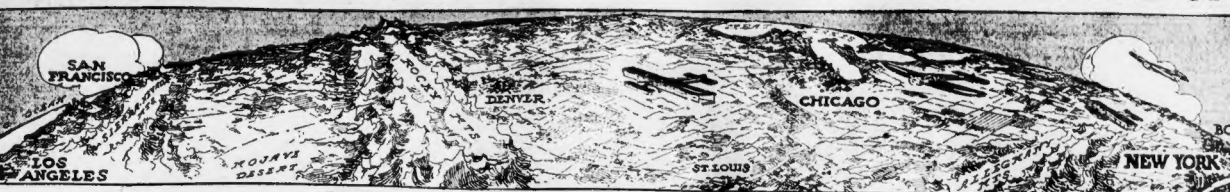
DETAILS OF HEARST $50,000 TRANS-CONTINENTAL FLIGHT OFFER



Supposed route of flyers in cross-continental flight for Mr. Hearst's $50,000 prize.

LANDING STATIONS ALL WAY ACROSS CONTINENT; AUTOS TO FOLLOW CONTESTANTS.

dicated in by the contestants who are on their way from coast to coast. This program provides that no serious contestant will go unrewarded.

Landing Places Provided.

Arrangements also will be made from one end of the continent to the other to provide the aviators with suitable landing places. These spots will be located adjacent to bases of supplies and easily accessible from cities and main arteries of communication. No place will be too small to provide such an aerial station. Under the conditions of the contest an aviator is permitted to land as often as he chooses and at any places he selects. In effect, these aerial way stations, extending from one side of the continent to the other, probably will form the basis of a permanent chain of aeroplane harbors to be used in future transcontinental air tours.

All along the various routes of flight preparations will be made to facilitate the passage of the airmen. Accommodations will be provided by State governments, municipalities and individuals to permit the contestants to store fuel and oil, extra aeroplane parts and substitute parts for motors that may be damaged or worn out. Provision will be made also to report the progress of the contestants constantly by telegraph and telephone so that they will never be wholly out of touch with the world. On the long stretches of sparsely populated territory beyond the Mississippi automobile clubs will organize special parties and trains in relays in order to come to the assistance of any contestant who may need aid. No aviator will ever be out of sight and reach of speedy succor.

The entire nation will be ready to speed the aviator to his goal.

Richest Prize Offered.

Aviators of the world are intensely interested in the offer of $50,000 to the person who flies across the American continent. Curtiss, the wrights and many others say the flight can and will be made.

The idea of cities helping to make up $50,000 of the prize money is to have each city reward the aviator favoring it especially. Thus St. Louis will reward an aviator who flew there from New York or Boston, and Kansas City, Denver etc., would do the same.

Regardless of others, however, William Randolph Hearst offers $50,000 in cash, to the aviator who is first to make an aerial trail over 3,000 miles that separates the Atlantic seaboard from the Pacific slope. It is the richest individual prize ever offered in America for the most important cross country aviation flight ever made.

The announcement of the Hearst prize offer of $50,000 cash for the first aeroplane flight across the American continent was the principal topic of discussion among aviators and aeronauts in all parts of the country.

At the Mineola field; at Hammondsport, Curtiss's home; at Dayton, the Wrights's headquarters, and at the meet in progress at St. Louis the men who fly and those who build flying machines were discussing the news. Wherever persons interested in aviation congregate there was keen and patriotic realization of the fact that the Hearst prize offer has reqained for America the lead in the world's aeronautic endeavors.

Great Incentive to Inventors.

It was freely predicted that during the next twelve months the principal aerial achievements of the year will be accomplished over the boundaries of the United States, and the opinion was general that the rich incentive of the Hearst prize will stimulate American aeroplane builders and inventors to produce a stronger, sturdier, safer and more efficient flying machine which will be the passenger-carrying aerial touring car of the future.

Leaders in the science, industry and sport, like Wilbur Wright, Glenn H. Curtiss, Walter Brookins and Clifford B. Harmon were quick to see the effects that the prize and the efforts to win it will have on the development of the new mode of transration.

These men and others, who are foremost in the world's aeronautic activities pointed out the many ways in which the Hearst prize will aid the development of aviation. Some were impressed with the educational effect on the 40,000,000 persons who will witness the pioneer aviator making the trail through the air lanes over the continent. Others dwelt upon the way it will bring into existence new industries which will provide work for thousands of skilled and unskilled toilers. Many were emphatic in the declaration Mr. Hearst's rich prize is the final incentive that will prove beyond question man has conquered the air for all practical transportation purposes. No prize ever offered has provoked so much interesting discussion.

Wilbur Wright Impressed by Offer.

Wilbur Wright, who "flew first," said: "I believe all prizes for extraordinary aeroplane contests are offered with the honest intention of encouraging the progress of aviation. But the enthusiasm of the donors often causes them to impose almost impossible conditions as a precedent to winning the prizes.

"What impresses me most about the Hearst offer is its perfect fairness. It is one of the few prizes an aviator can reasonably hope to win. The transcontinental flight can be made. Aeroplane can fly from 50 to 500 miles in one day, but there are always intervals when flight may be impossible. You may encounter hurricanes, torrential rains and other impossible atmospheric conditions.

"A motor is not absolutely perfect. It sometimes develops freaky strains lasting over several days. Then you must stop to repair it. It is also certain in the course of this epochal flight that parts of the aeroplane will succumb to the extraordinary strain and the craft will need repairs. Accidents also are probable. I think sixty days ought to be allowed for this reason.

Most important of all is the fact that the flight will be a terrific strain on the aviator. The man who makes it will be exceptional, physically and intellectually. He will need every atom of courage in his make-up. As a test of the effects of a continuous flight on a human being I believe this competition will prove momentous. It should prove fruitful for the physiologists and psychologists, as well as aeronauts. It will have a bearing on many avenues of human activity for many years to come.

Special Machines to Be Built.

"Personally, I believe a special machine will be built for this flight. From an aeronautic standpoint, a transcontinental flight of several months will be the production of a standard craft built specially to withstand the tremendous motor strain of the trip. It is not improbable that we may build such a machine parallel to Father's plans, if the circumstances of our business permit. With all things considered, I say that I believe the Wright machine is the one which can accomplish the flight with a minimum of repairs. Our comparatively slow-going craft are built for heavy work and long wear and tear and are capable of taking long strain at moderate speed.

"I wish especially to commend the clean and sportsmanlike spirit in which Hearst's offer. It is a fair prize for a reasonable feat. It is a prize seriously offered with the intention that it should be won.

BALLOON FLIES 60 MILES.

FITZWILLIAM, N. H., Oct. 10.—The balloon "Heart of the Berkshires," carrying William Van Sicel of Pittsfield aspiring and Jay B. Benton of Boston, landed here after a 60-mile trip from Pittsfield, Mass. The aeronauts encountered heavy clouds most of the journey. The highest elevation reached was 4,500 feet.

ADMIRAL EVANS, WHO LAUDS HEARST PRIZE FOR FLIERS

HEARST OFFER MEANS A SAFER AEROPLANE, SAYS 'FIGHTING BOB'

"I believe the Hearst $50,000 prize for an aeroplane flight across the continent will be won, but it will be fraught with great peril. Its most important effect will be the production of a more perfect and safer type of aeroplane," said Rear-Admiral Robley D. Evans, last night, when asked for his opinion on the proposed flight from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"Aeroplanes to-day are good for short flights," continued the admiral, "but to cross this continent something far more substantial will have to be built. The danger will not be met in crossing the deserts and plains, but in the mountains, where treacherous sweeps of wind are likely to tip over the present type of aeroplanes.

"This munificent offer by Mr. Hearst will, to my mind, spur aeroplane manufacturers to produce the machine that will be able to meet almost any emergency.

"I noticed the Wrights at once announced their intention of getting to work on a better machine. That is what we want. The recent tragic death of Chavez, who crossed the Alps, proves the weaknesses in the present machines."

PAPAL LEGATE SOUNDS PRAISE OF BOSTON SEE

Expressions of gratification in behalf of Pope Pius X. at the loyalty of the archdiocese of Boston and personal gratification to the clergy and laity of Boston characterized the closing remarks of Vincenzo, Cardinal Vannutelli, Papal legate to the Eucharistic Conference in Montreal at the close of a two-days' visit to Archbishop O'Connell and his see.

The fact that he had but a few days more to spend in America and many engagements still to fill, forced the Papal legate this morning to make brief his stay as guest of Archbishop O'Connell.

Twice Praises Boston's Piety.

The Cardinal made statements significant of the important position which Boston holds in the Catholic world when he addressed before the mass which was attended by the cardinal at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, that, aside from his natural desire to visit the city, he would have come because Pope Pius X. had directed him to the same journey to Boston during his stay in America.

Five hundred uniformed fourth degree members of the Knights of Columbus formed in line near the Cottage Farm Bridge and marched to Archbishop O'Connell's house on Granby street. The cardinal and the archbishop then started for the Cathedral under escort of the marchers.

Passing in the vestibule, the cardinal was vested with the Cappa Magna, and a procession led by the cardinal, archbishop and many other clergymen, moved up the aisle to the altar. Fully 4,000 people were crowded into the church, and hundreds more had been unable to gain admission.

The cardinal moved to the throne on the epistle side. Archbishop O'Connell installed the solemn pontifical mass. The Rev. Thomas B. McCoy of the Cathedral was assistant priest, the Rev. Daniel Desmond and the Rev. James Fitzgibbon of St. John's Seminary deacon and subdeacon. The Rev. Brennan was color bearer. Mgr. M. J. Splaine, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Charles J. Sullivan, was master of ceremonies.

Blessing in Italian.

At the end of the mass Archbishop O'Connell said:

"I, in our privilege, my dear people, to welcome to the city of Boston and to this see of ours his eminence, Cardinal Vannutelli.

"Now, your eminence, in the name of my true people, I ask you to give to us the blessing of the Holy Father, imparting to us his apostolic benediction."

The cardinal then said in Italian of his pleasure in having attended the ceremony and at the warmth of the welcome tendered by the see of Boston. He added the words which showed the various lines of interest in the archdiocese, that the Pope had given direction to the cardinal for this trip. The congregation numbered many prominent Catholics, Mayor Fitzgerald and the Irish envoys.

HUNDRED WELCOME TWO BRIDES-TO-BE

Official procedure was waived by the immigration officials at Long Wharf to-day in order that the marriage of two Italian girl immigrants to North End young men might take place in the Italian Church in North square. Ordinarily a civil marriage is required at the wharf when immigrants seek to enter the country for marriage. The officials relaxed the rule to-day when Raphael Parretto and Angelo Saviane of the North End, appeared at the immigration station at the head of a procession of over a hundred of their countrymen to claim their brides. Antoinetta Di Armentillo and Elizabeth Carputa, respectively.

FENCES OFF STREET TO SAVE RIGHTS

People living in the vicinity of Wyman street, Roslindale, were surprised to see a wire fence stretched across the head of that street. This fence effectually shut off all travel and was erected by order of Lewis A. Freeman, who owns the property. The fence is but a temporary affair put up simply to save Mr. Freeman's rights under the law that provides that a way traveled by the public uninterrupted for a certain number of years becomes a public thoroughfare.

MIDDLESEX A. O. H. ELECTS HAROLD

The following officers were elected at the Middlesex County Convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, held at Institute Hall, Cambridge: President, James J. Herold of Waltham; vice-president, Bernard Horgan of Lowell; recording secretary, John H. Craig of Natick; financial secretary, Charles Hogan of Concord; treasurer, Thomas J. Green of West Newton.

SOCIALISTS PARADE TO FANEUIL HALL

The Socialists of Greater Boston will meet in Faneuil Hall to-night to ratify their State ticket. Previous to the meeting they will parade from Socialist headquarters, No. 14 Pare square, to the hall. Daniel A. White of Brockton, candidate for Governor; Patrick Mahoney of Boston, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor; Morris Hillquit of New York, Morgan Gray of Wentworth of Salem, Harold Metcalf of New Bedford, candidate for Attorney-General, and others will speak.

BURGLARS NET $500 IN GLOUCESTER

GLOUCESTER, Oct. 10.—The home of Charles S. Nauss, at the corner of Commonwealth avenue and Washington street, was entered by burglars and jewelry and silverware worth $500 were taken. The thieves secured a watch and pin valued at $250, $20 in bills and a number of spoons, knives, ladies and other articles of table ware.

SHOE HEARING POSTPONED.

A hearing on the bill of the United Shoe Machinery Company vs. Euclid L. La Chapelle to compel the defendant to assign to it certain patents relating to inventions on shoe machinery which he made while in the company's employ, was put over until October 31 by Judge Hitchcock in equity session of the Superior Court to-day.

TAFT NURSES BLISTER DUE TO TIGHT SHOE

BEVERLY, Oct. 10.—President Taft, the victim of a tight shoe, is wearing a carpet slipper on one foot in receiving visitors to-day. A new pair of shoes was responsible for the annoyance, the pinch of one causing a blister and some inflammation on the instep of the foot.

The President to-day enters upon the last week of his vacation, as he expects to leave Beverly next week and return to Washington. He will probably sign a lease for a house before his departure, as Mrs. Taft has given considerable attention to the question of another Summer residence in this vicinity.

Golf is to be taken up as a pastime again just as soon as his foot trouble disappears and allows a visit to the Myopia links.

Otto T. Bannard, a personal and political friend, whose opinions about New York politics he has great confidence in, has departed for home. Probably one or two other eminent New York Republicans will be at Beverly before the week is over.

For about three weeks, at least, after his return to Washington, the President will stick closely to the White House. He is already giving a deal of thought to his annual message to Congress.

The result of the elections will influence his treatment of several portions of that document. In other particulars, however, the President is following plans that were blocked out long ago.

COMING OUT BALL FOR HELEN TAFT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—According to well-informed social mentors here it now appears that Miss Helen Taft, daughter of the President, and the leading debutante of the season, will be presented to society at a Christmas ball to be given in the White House in her honor. To this ball will be invited the elite, debutantes of Washington society, and it is expected to equal in brilliancy the coming out ball of Miss Ethel Roosevelt, the last White House debutante.

DENTISTS TO CONVENE AT HOTEL SOMERSET

The sixteenth annual meeting of the Massachusetts Dental Association will be held in the Hotel Somerset October 20, 21 and 22. The convention will be called to order at 10 o'clock on Thursday, and on the opening day a paper will be read by Charles K. Teter on Nitrous Oxide and Oxygen," to be followed by a general discussion.

PRIMATE OF IRELAND DECLARES PORTUGAL IS ENEMY OF CHURCH

We live in an evil age, an age where men's minds are given to materialistic pursuits. The latest institution of this is the new political crisis in Portugal. One of the first acts of those men was to turn themselves against the church and expel the nuns and the monks. That is an instance of how men act in the present day. I do not find fault with the mere form of government, for the church recognizes all monarchs, republics, or oligarchies—provided that the government is directed and regulated by the law of God. Ostensibly the new government in Portugal was started in the name of freedom, but in reality it was a blow against the church.—Cardinal Logue, primate of Ireland, at New York mass meeting.

SIGNS AWAY $60,000 TO "DOWIE SPIRIT"

YORK, Me., Oct. 10.—"I am the sister of Wilbur Glenn Voliva, head of the Zionists, but I have not seen my brother for twelve years. I believe that at three distinct times in my life I have been under the control of the late John Alexander Dowie, whom I never met. On each of these occasions, twice when he was in the spirit world, I have been induced to write checks and forward them to Zion City, signing away the sum total of $60,000, or two-thirds of my entire fortune," is asserts a mild-mannered woman of forty-five years, living temporarily in this town since her return from Europe, she says she is Miss Margaret R. Voliva.

REFUSE TO CLOSE COLUMBUS DAY

WALTHAM, Oct. 10.—Both the Waltham Watch Company and the Boston Manufacturing Company have notified their employes that there will be no holiday on Wednesday, Columbus Day, and some of the lesser concerns have followed their lead. A joint committee of the Waltham Council, Knights of Columbus, and the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's Church, will wait on the managers of the factories to-day in an effort to reconsider their intention of not closing.

BLUECOAT FALLS; MAY DIE.

LOWELL, Oct. 10.—Patrolman Daniel C. Downing fell down a flight of stairs at his home early to-day and received a fractured skull. At St. John's Hospital, where he was operated on, it is not thought he will live.

FIGHT TO SAVE BURIED MINERS

STARKVILLE, Col., Oct. 10.—More than a hundred miners to-day still are risking their lives in the apparently futile hope of rescuing fifty-two of their comrades from death in the Starkville mine, where they are buried under tons of coal.

Of the fifty-two men in the mine ten are Americans. Most of the number are Poles, who rescue party-which penetrated the pit for more than a mile was driven back by the same afterdamp. In fact, many of the rescuers had to be rescued themselves.

TECH ECONOMIST IS BANKING AUDITOR

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Early attempts to solve the problems of banking in this country, particularly those connected with the issue of notes, are described in a treatise just published by the National Monetary Commission, under the title "State Banking Before the Civil War." The authors are Professor Davis R. Dewey, the well-known economist of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Dr. Robert C. Chaddock of the University of Pennsylvania.

SATURDAY—Young Kahn v. Ed McGeoch, Milwaukee; Jack Blackburn v. Jack Houck, Philadelphia; bouts at Portland, Me., Mickey Gannon v. Benny Wilson, Philadelphia.

When Tommy Quill of Brockton and Leo Houck of Lancaster, Pa., meet before the Armory Athletic Club to-morrow night Quill will have the worst of the weight by a few pounds, but as offsets this by being faster on his feet and having a better left hand. In all other respects the bids seem equally matched. Both have clean records, their gameness, and both are strong, willing fighters who keep at one another all the time they are in the ring.

The showing of Quill at Brockton are taking unusual interest in this event, and will be on hand to cheer Tommy on to victory. Quill is working under the care of Jack Edwards of Philadelphia, and is reported to good shape.

The winner of this match will have a claim to the lightweight championship title. Houck has eliminated Harry Lewis by beating him twice in a month. Houck's figures to win decisively, but Quill intends to make a fight that will be interesting all through the engagement.

Three six-round bouts precede the main bout. Jack Dillon, Boston lad, will meet Young Wells, New York, in the first bout. Jack Sharkey, Philadelphia, will box Jack Blackburn, Philadelphia, in the second bout. Jack Hoffer, Boston, will meet Jack Cross, Philadelphia, in the third bout.

CHAMPION BILLIARD PLAYERS FOR BOSTON

By ED. COGSWELL.

Billiard enthusiasts will have plenty of attention from now on till the close of the season, if the local rom owners carry out the entire programme they have mapped out, and there is enough talent already secured to make matters extremely interesting.

Ora Morningstar is a particular favorite in this city, his circle of friends having been gained while on the Colonial House a few years ago. There is probably no player who can show a better exhibit of fancy shots, which is one of the very attractive feature of a billiard match, dexterity in control of the balls.

Willie Hoppe Coming.

Monte Vatter has the king of billiard manipulators, the champion of champions Willie Hoppe, billed to show at his studio on November 3, 4 and 5, the cracks back coming immediately to this city after playing here for the 18-1 title on Wednesday, November 2, with George Sloss in New York, at 500 points.

Getting Mr. Hoppe was a big card for Mr. Vatter in the opening of his billiard studio, which has formed separate from the regular public billiard rooms permits those wishing to see the champion when visiting with the general players in public rooms to do so without being molested in the least.

Mr. Vatter is now in active training to play Mr. Hoppe to his afternoon games, while George Carter will make the things interesting in the evening sessions. It is Mr. Vatter's desire to go a private match against the king than does Mr. Carter, so he will be able to devote his time to keeping both head players at top pitch.

Later on it is the plan of Mr. Vatter to hold a cushion carom tournament in his studio for the championship of New England. Not since Billy Marshall's time has a tourney of the kind been held in this city, and adepts at the game are now keen for a meeting.

Boston in National Association.

By the way, the National Billiard Association, of which Boston is one of the representative cities, the games here to be played at Lew Curtis's imperial billiard room, is creating wide interest.

The first games here take place November 1, 2 and 3 against New York. Each match is for fifty points at three-cushions. For Boston representation attention is given to the one of the cleverest amateurs at this style of playing, New York will send over Dion Blair for the opening matches.

Johnny Kling, the noted baseball catcher, is president of the association, while Willie Mussey of Chicago is vice president and John Doyle of New York, is secretary and treasurer. Maurice Daly of New York, Harry Davis of Pittsburg, Lew Curtis of Boston, Charles Peterson of Chicago, Sol Allinger of Philadelphia and Frank Keeney of Brooklyn comprise the board of control. The cities in the association are made up of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and Brooklyn, and the schedule mapped out carries the series along till April 6.

So far as can be learned, outside of Messrs. Mussey and Blair, previously named, the representatives of the other cities will be Stanley Kendall for Chicago, Mr. Rankin for Kansas City and Dr. Campbell for St. Louis. The remaining cities have not designated their player.

Crack Pool Players Due.

At Mish Murray's White Bear there will not be much attention given to the star billiard players as to the pool champions, past and present, this Winter as was the case last season. This is pleasing to the devotees of pool. Mr. Murray realizes the game is losing public of Boston that before the Spring has arrived there will be seen at his parlors the best experts at pool in the world.

The match of much interest to the knights of the green baize cloth, is the match at fifteen-ball between Albert G. Cutler of this city and Willie Hoppe, the champion at the task the game, which begins November 13, and includes Academy, New York, and will continue for six nights. The match will be for 2,000 points and 400 points a night are played.

Hoppe will endeavor to play 18-1 balline against Cutler's 18-2 game, and as the Boston cueist is in excellent practice many of his friends have expressed a willingness to back him to defeat Hoppe, the youthful champion, at the handicap match proposed.

The meeting of Cutler and Hoppe in this handicap event has given rise to much discussion as to just are the exact odds of 18-1 against 18-2 billiards. The estimates of the expert players vary greatly in this regard. Some contend that the 18-1 game is of just cent more difficult than 18-2, while others maintain that the difference is not more than 25 per cent.

LAJOIE BEATS COBB FOR BATTING HONOR

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 10.—Larry Lajoie, second baseman of the Cleveland team, is the premier batsman of the American League. Unofficial figures, compiled today give him a lead of two points over Ty Cobb of Detroit. If the figures are borne out by the official averages of the league, the Naps star player has beat out the Georgia Peach for the prize automobile.

Lajoie's average, according to unofficial figures is .385, while Cobb's is .383. The official averages, which will definitely decide who is entitled to the highest batting honors in the league, will not be made public next January.

Cobb and the rest of the Tiger bunch declare that the veteran batsman jumped into the lead because of a "lay down" on the part of members of the St. Louis American team in its doubleheader with the Naps yesterday. Lajoie garnered eight hits in as many trips to the plate.

Never before in the history of baseball has the integrity of the game been questioned as it was by 8,000 fans who saw Lajoie clearly allowed to make the hits that won him the honor.

Lajoie was credited with four hits in his many trips in the first battle, and the same number in the second contest out of the three at the bat. One failure to reach first on a safe hit coming in the third inning of the second game, and he was credited with a sacrifice.

Not one of the hits was the result of bad scoring or favoritism. It was simply a case of Lajoie batting the ball safely down to Corridon at third no less than six times, and forcing Wallace, and getting every one of them out, while his other hit went for a triple to center. Even this drive was misjudged and played badly by Nathan.

The eight hits secured by Lajoie six were infield affairs, five of them along the third base line.

His first hit was a triple to left centre, and his second a drive to Shortstop Wallace, second baseman of the Cleveland team, which on which the local infielder made a pretty stop and a poor throw to first. Lajoie's drive was clean-cut, Northern fielding the ball as fast as it could have been fielded. Then in the third inning Lajoie cut sharply to Wallace.

Each time thereafter he bunted. His first infield hit came in the fifth inning, when he bent a roller along the third base line. In the eighth inning he duplicated the performance.

In the second game Larry did nothing save bunt. His opportunity came first in the initial inning. That was a bunt along the third base line.

In the third inning a boy who carried bats for the teams was sent all the way up to the second deck of the grandstand to find out whether or not Lajoie had been credited with a hit on his roller to Corridon, which the latter fumbled. Lajoie was on base at the time, and as Lajoie batted he was credited with a sacrifice, and Corridon, who fumbled, with an error.

At this stage of the game Lajoie and pitcher Harry Krause, who is said to be Cobb's mark and eight to win; therefore Larry would have to be at bat three times and get the same number of hits, and he was.

E. H. S. BATTLES DORCHESTER ON COLUMBUS DAY

From the number of school football games scheduled for Wednesday, Columbus Day will soon be rivaling Thanksgiving Day as being the chief day in the year for the schoolboy gridiron warriors.

The chief game down on the card is that between English High and Dorchester at the Dunbar avenue grounds at 10 o'clock. This game is sure to draw out a great crowd of schoolboy fans and will be on hand early to get a line on the team that is representing the light and dark blue. From the showing that English High made to date it is picked to win the championship in the Interscholastic League over such fast teams as Hyde and Somerville.

Coach James H. Crowley, who is in charge of this year's team at the Montgomery street school has been rather fortunate in having most all of the veterans of last year's team on hand. With this great foundation to build from Coach Crowley has developed one of the smoothest working football teams that has represented the light and the dark blue for many years.

At Dorchester the chances for a championship pennant are not so bright as most all the members of last year's team have been lost by graduation. The student body to a man is with Coach John O'Brien, who has charge of the team this season, and they are confident that with the help of the schoolboy coaches directing affairs that their eleven will be able to hold it's own in the clash with English High, and in the remaining games in the Interscholastic League.

It is probable that all the E. H. S. regulars will be on hand with the exception of "Billy" Morris, English High's star all-around athlete, who is on the crippled list with a dislocated shoulder as the result of the South Boston game last week.

Somerville High will celebrate Columbus Day by meeting Boston Latin at Broadway Field. The Red and Blue football warriors should experience little difficulty in defeating the Latin school players, who are not over strong this season.

Every time Latin eke out a winning game the hands of Groton two weeks ago Coach White has been working over-time in an effort to develop a line of defensive strength to hold its own with the strong teams of both the Interscholastic and the Suburban leagues.

One of the greatest improvements of the season was the showing of the Somerville team against Medford. Samuel "Jack" Dardis was shifted from end to halfback and made a fine showing. Time and again he ripped the Medford line for long gains. His place at end was filled by Grant. Bob Garland played his same old-fashioned line plunging game scoring half of the Somerville touchdowns. Bill Parks at quarterback showed up well.

The High School of Commerce will play its second game of the season on Tuesday, lining up against Brookline High at the Cypress street grounds, Brookline. From the showing that Commerce made in its initial game, 52 to 0, when it defeated Brockton High under the most adverse weather conditions this year's team at the Newton school is set to make a fine showing among the Boston schools.

Coach O'Donnell has backfield is one of the best in the city, with such speedy men as "Pete" Donnelly, "Red" Sullivan, Bill Mahery, and Brown on hand. The Commerce line is also strong with such clever linemen as "Sunny Jim" Kennedy, Courtie, Smith, Duffy, Monahan and Taylor playing in fine form.

South Boston High will meet Lowell High Wednesday at Lowell. This game is the first of the season to be played by Joe Redding, who gives promise of developing a fast team. Johnny Kane, the clever little all-around athlete, is captain of this year's eleven and the confident his team will make a very creditable showing in the Boston High School League.

How Cubs and Athletics Line Up

SCHULTE vs. MURPHY in Right Field

This is the second of a series of articles comparing the individual players of the Cubs and Athletics. It is written by the baseball writer of the Chicago American, who has watched the Cubs at short range.

By Bill Bailey.

YOU never think of Frank Schulte as a youngster. You have been watching the right fielder of the Cubs so long that you have got the impression that he is a veteran in years as well as in experience.

But he isn't.

That is when you compare him to Danny Murphy, the right fielder of the Athletics, and the man he will have to face in the world's series.

Schulte is twenty-seven years of age. Murphy is thirty-five. Schulte is one of the few men on the Cub team who has been fewer years than the man playing opposite him. But when it comes to experience; when it comes to playing in games that have something more than the ordinary victory at stake Schulte still has it on his rival, for he has played in all the big games the Cubs have indulged in. Which certainly have been many.

Schulte One of the Characters.

The fans watching him in right field would get the impression that he never had anything to say. That is almost right. The difference is that when he does speak he has something to say. As, for instance:

In the Spring time when the Cubs were on the training trip all the reporters heralded Schulte's territory. In the practices I mean. They couldn't go elsewhere. So they went in left. Sheckard would chase them. It was on the return South that Hofman did the driving. So they all flocked to right field, figuring that Schulte was good-natured, easy-going and that he would make no fuss.

Well, it was certainly that the limit would be reached some time and the blow-off came shortly before the squad was divided into two teams. There was a whole flock of recruits in right field practicing. Schulte had difficulty in getting the balls that were batted for him. Finally he became angry.

"Hey, you," he shouted, "and you" and he called all the recruits about him.

"Every fellow who takes a crack at my field in the practice," he began when they had all assembled, "don't get the wrong impression that you have a chance for the job.

"When the season opens Frank Schulte will be playing right field. When the season closes, Frank Schulte will be playing in right. And Frank Schulte will be playing there, in the meantime. See?

They did.

Schulte Star This Year.

Schulte had the right dope. He was playing the right field and how he has played it this year. You know Schulte has been one of the really great stars of the game this year. He never had a better.

He has been a demon with the willow club. As, for instance, he hammered out four home runs in one game against the Giants, and smashed two of them in succession.

He has the credit of making the longest hit ever made on the West Side. He was the monster steel score board in right field.

If Schulte was as dashing as Ty Cobb, he would be one of the most popular men in the game to-day. With the fans I mean. Cobb will run through you, or by hell and grab it with one hand. Schulte is another proposition. If time permits, and camp under the spiral.

He seems to be loafing when he is hurrying. It's seldom he makes a play that strikes the crowd as being spectacular. Even when he steps back the crowd feels the fence with his gloved hand it looks easy.

That's his manner—he makes everything look really easier than it is. Instead of making easy chances look different.

It's his nature.

"Schulte, how do you like playing right field for the Cubs?" some one asked him one day.

Likes His Position.

"Oh, pretty well," was his answer. "Not much to do out there. Every time a fellow hits one to my right Artie Hofman comes running over there yelling, 'I got it.'

"Every time a fellow lifts a short fly back of the infield Johnny Evers comes racing back, yelling, 'I got it.'

"All I have to do is to stand back there and yell, 'Well, take it, then.'"

Which shows that Schulte is not given to wrangling.

West Side fans swear by Schulte and they are firmly convinced that Murphy will meet a man who will outclass him when they look up in the world's series. At that there is not a great deal of difference in the figures.

Schulte is closing at a .291 clip. Murphy has it on him by a slight margin, since he had a record of .296 in '14, and .293 in '13, a great deal of difference in those figures. Both are sluggers. Schulte clouted out 147 hits during the year and got 221 bases on them. That gave him seventy-four extra bases.

Murphy made 163 hits for a total of 234 bases. Those figures show that he secured seventy-one bases on his clouts.

The figures on base stealing and sacrifice hits give Schulte a slight lead. But it is very slight one. The Chicago man stole twenty bases and made twenty-five sacrifice hits in 138 games, while Murphy was right there with one less stolen base and the same number of sacrifice hits in 154 contests.

Murphy is one of the veterans of the Athletic team and saw service in the world's series between the Philadelphia boys and the New York Giants. And in this series Murphy's new team was a big factor against one that had tried him out and then pronounced him unfit.

For Murphy is one of those players who made good after being chased to the minors. Murphy formerly was a second baseman. The showing of Eddie Collins rebuked him of that bag, but he was such a stonier that Connie Mack did not want him to sit on the bench. So he attempted to make an outfielder of Murphy. He succeeded.

Murphy began playing professional baseball in 1904 at Worcester, Mass. He remained in the New England League for five years.

BIG MERCHANTS GIVE METS CUPS FOR HORSE SHOW

The annual Autumn one-air horse show of the Metropolitan Driving Club, which is carded for Wednesday, Columbus Day, at Charles River Speedway, has received a splendid entry of 200 horses, and a very brisk and entertaining competition is assured in the saddle, harness and hunting classes.

Good weather is all that is needed to make the "Mets" horse show a tremendous success, for their show ring is the largest out-door arena of its kind in this country and the location is ideal.

The executive committee of the "Mets" horse show, Messrs. Edgar Bowes, chairman, E. V. R. Thayer, Williams H. Emerson, Thomas W. Mack, A. W. Davis and E. A. Fuller, announce that the judging of the horses will begin promptly at 11 a. m. on Columbus Day.

Many of the leading merchants of Boston are included among the donors of the silver cups that in the various classes accompany the blue ribbon as the first award.

The Leopold Morse Company offer a handsome silver cup for the best single horses, and Messrs. Lithgow, Maher & Co., the state street bankers, will give a silver prize for the best family horse.

The London Harness Company are to reward the best pair of high-steppers 15.2 or over, with a cup, and C. F. Baker offers a similar cup for the same class for a pair 15.2 or under.

The Quincy-Adams Agricultural Society is the donor of a handsome silver loving cup for the best tandem pairs, a friend of the "Mets" offers a silver prize in the runabout class, and C. H. Fraser, the cigar manufacturer, will reward the best saddle horse with a silver cup.

President Harry L. Burrage of the Eliot National Bank will present a beautiful silver cup to the best single high stepper 15.2 or under, while M. Maurice Dimond is a donor for the novice class, and Louis Roles son, the popular official of the Boston Gun Club, the Dedham Club, offers a silver cup in the pig horse class.

F. D. Hunt of Brookline will reward the saddlers with a silver cup, and the Adams House offers a handsome trophy for the single high steppers, 15.2 hands or over. A friend of the "Mets" gives a $50 cup for the four-in-hand pole. C. H. Belleden will present the best runabout horse with a cup, and J. V. V. Stults is the donor of a silver cup for the sporting tandems.

HARVARD ELEVEN IN SECRET PRACTICE

By E. V. B. PARKE.

After coming through the Williams game with flying colors and comparatively no injuries, the Harvard football team resumes its regular practice in the Stadium to-day behind closed doors. It is expected Coach Haughton, who has been laid up with a slight illness, will be out to personally direct the men for their contest with Amherst next Saturday.

It will henceforth be the policy of the coaches to hold secret work for the first three days of each week, while the next two will be public, a scrimmage being the rule on Fridays. This schedule was put into effect last Monday, so keep away from Soldiers Field on those days when secret practice is on.

Although the game with Amherst is not expected to prove as hard as that with Williams, the work will be hard this week, for there are other games to come, and the coaches want to turn out the best eleven this year that ever represented Harvard. From indications it looks as though they were going to do so. The game with Amherst, the end of the week, will be the first the Crimson has played with this college since 1905, when Amherst defeated Harvard in the last few minutes of play, by recovering a blocked kick over the Crimson goal line for a touchdown, the final score standing 5 to 0. It is safe to say that Harvard is desirous of wiping out this blemish on the Crimson record, and will get after Amherst for all it is worth, hence the hard work in store for the Crimson warriors this week.

Comes Through Unscathed.

With but two exceptions the Crimson team came through the Williams struggle, which proved to be a fight to a finish, uncrushed, the only two men laid up at all being Quarterback Wiggin-worth and Halfback Frothingham. The former's injury was but slight, and he will be back in the game in a day or two, while Frothingham slightly wrenched his leg. This injury will not keep him out long, and the Crimson will doubtless be able to avail itself of his services in the Amherst game.

Corbett, the star halfback, and famous for his skin-tackle plays and spectacular dashes through a broken field, was not played in the game with Williams, as he had been out most of the week with a slight infection of his right hand. He was in the signal drill with the team on Friday, and it was at first thought he would enter the contest Saturday, but the coaches apparently considered that an ounce of prevention was worth a pound of cure, and decided to save him for the later games, or at least spare him till there was no longer any danger of mishap befalling his hand.

"Shorty" Long, the promising candidate for one of the end positions, has been laid up for the past ten days with a sprained ankle, but has now recovered and will be seen in the scrimmages again this week. He took long runs around the field after the game on Saturday and seemed to be in excellent condition.

So far the Crimson has been exceedingly lucky in not having experienced any serious injuries, which formerly used to cripple the Crimson team.

Harvard Line Strong.

The game with Williams afforded ample proof of all that has been said of the strength of the Harvard line, both on the offense and defense, for the Crimson forwards hardly ever found trouble in opening up holes for their runners, or on the defense, bringing up hosts of the Williams attack, which, by the way, was a pretty speedy and heavy one.

The only time when the Crimson line fell down was when it failed to smash the backs for the requisite 5 yards for a touchdown in three downs, but this merely illustrates what has been said before in these columns, of the difficulty which evenly matched teams are apt to experience this year in scoring when they get the ball within the 20-yard line, unless recourse is had to drop kicking or a placement kick.

Almost everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

HOW DO YOU LIKE THE ADVERTISING I WRITE FOR GALE & KENT?

MELVIN WILLIAMS

The firm of Gale & Kent are in constant receipt of letters commenting on my advertising. I, myself, am being criticized by other advertising writers.

The main contention is that I say too much—that I should use bigger type and a lot of pictures. Other advertising writers say that nobody will read what I put into my stories about 96 Court Street.

But you know they are wrong, because you are reading this advertisement—every word of it.

Further than that, you are an intelligent man or else you would be looking at the pictures. I don't think it requires much intelligence to look at pictures—especially pictures that accompany advertising copy.

So much for an introduction. Now for a few things for you to think about—things concerning your next Suit or Overcoat.

Are you going to let Gale & Kent make it? They are making more Clothes for more men this Fall at 96 Court Street than they ever made in a Fall season for 18 years.

All the old customers are coming back and getting new clothes and hundreds of new names are going onto the books. Everything is booming at Gale & Kent's.

And all because they make good Clothes for everybody. A Suit (or Overcoat) will cost you $15 to $25—depending on the cloth and trimmings you select. All work is alike on all the Clothes turned out at 96 Court Street. The very best grade of woolens are used. The work is all done on the premises under the most approved sanitary conditions. If you wear Gale & Kent Clothes you can rest assured that several journeymen tailors received living wages for the time they expended on the making of the garments.

Every coat built by Gale & Kent is made after their famous design, with "The-front-that-won't-break-down."

Every garment that leaves their tailor shop is guaranteed as to style, fit, wear and workmanship. They will make good on any complaint at 96 Court Street just as cheerfully as though they were taking your measure for a Suit of Clothes.

But of the high-rent district—18 years in business—both partners right on the job all the time—cheerest tailor shop in Boston—open every evening in the week—and now, if you don't give them your next order for a Suit (or Overcoat) and pay your $15 to $25 for it you can't blame me.

BOSTON AMERICAN'S DOUBLE

What Can He See in Her?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THEY sat opposite me in the subway, a youngish couple, evidently husband and wife.

By youngish, I mean anywhere between thirty and forty.

The woman was quite the most irredeemably plain woman I ever saw.

Not a feature of her face followed the lines it should have and her complexion was sallow and muddy.

She was well dressed, but she had no style. Her clothes were put on as though she had dressed in the dark.

In every respect she seemed a thoroughly unattractive woman.

And the man, with true masculine inconsistency, was very much in love with her.

He was most lover like in his attentions, and I believe he actually thought her good looking.

"What can he see in her?" I said to myself, in wonder. "Nine out of ten men would be repelled by her ugliness."

It is said that "beauty lies in the eye of the beholder," and it was true in this case.

It's a fortunate thing that we don't all see each other in the same light, or it would be even more complicated than it is already. A hundred women, all in love with the same man, would be a tragic state of affairs.

The Mystery of Attraction

In this plain woman there was some indefinable quality that charmed and enthralled her husband. In compensation for her plain face she had been given the power to make at least one man love her.

Every day you see women that make you wonder how in the world they ever managed to get married.

You see a certain man and say to yourself, "I would rather die than be married to that man," and yet some woman loves him and finds life's highest happiness in being his wife.

Not long ago I met an old school friend. She had married, but I had never met her husband.

I had received many letters describing his perfections—"a godlike man," she had called him in one letter.

I remembered our schoolgirl rhapsodies about the ideal men. Mary had such lofty ideals as to what qualities her future lord and master must possess that I was quite surprised when she wrote announcing her engagement.

"I am engaged to the best, the most wonderful man in the world," she wrote. "She has found her ideal," I thought, and was duly impressed.

They came to town, and I was invited to meet the "godlike man."

I was half afraid to meet him. I did want to make a good impression on Mary's ideal man.

The Meeting

I suppose "ideal husbands" are not supposed to notice what other women wear, but I must say I fussed a good deal over my costume the night I went to meet the godlike man.

I was shown up to their sitting-room and presently Mary, tall, pretty and charming as ever, swept in.

"Charles will be ready directly," she said, after we had kissed and said we hadn't changed a bit and taken a rapid and surreptitious survey of each other's costumes from head to feet.

"And to think that you really found your ideal, Mary! Isn't it wonderful that a man should possess all those qualities and marvelous good looks."

"Well," said Mary, evasively, "Charles, of course, is not exactly like that hitby ideal of mine, but he really is far more splendid. Here he comes, and you can see for yourself."

The door opened, and I turned to meet the man who was even more splendid than Mary's ideal.

And, my dears, what do you think I saw?

A short, stout man, with no waist line and not very much hair.

He trotted pompously into the room and shook my hand up and down like a pump handle when Mary introduced us.

His voice was high and squeaky. Where, alas, were his deep, melodious tones possessed by the ideal? If I remember correctly, they were to roll forth like the sound of many waters.

We women talked but little during dinner.

The godlike man talked fussily, didactically and continuously, and Mary listened with rapt attention and an air which clearly said, "Isn't it wonderful?"

And he was a wonder of dullness.

We went home and mournfully removed my unappreciated costume and crept into bed musing on many things and my last remark thought was:

"What can she see in him?"

A short, stout man with no waistline and not very much hair.

Daysey Mayme Appleton

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

"DON'T say the days of romance are ended," wrote Daysey Mayme Appleton in a letter to her aunt. "I never bump my nose out of doors that I don't bump it against a romantic situation, and this time it was all brought about by going down-town to buy five cents' worth of liver. In times past I have scorned such an errand, but now I know that no means is too humble to make a gay sky rose-colored, and will never pass a butcher shop without getting a tender memory whiff.

"I was getting off a subway car when a man caught my arm and took me along with him; I had on my new hat that covers all but my chin, and knew at once that he had lost the girl he was with in the crowd, and mistook me for her. He talked the New York language, so I couldn't tell what he was saying, but I gathered up my bobble skrit, and made pretty good time in keeping up, and very soon we came to a restaurant. He ordered all those things on the bill of fare that sound like the names of the French arts and crafts—I would do their share of the work my boy would get time to eat something. As it is he scarcely touches a thing but enough to keep a bird alive—he's that thrifty.

"Do I get anything to drink with this?" said Jos, looking sadly at a fragment of lettuce on his plate.

"I'll bring you some water," said Mrs. Wilson, shortly, as she gathered the dishes from the table and swept into the kitchen.

"Can you beat it?" said Weinstein, disgustedly. "Gee! I wish I was where I could use the lights!"

"Oh, stick it out!" said Merkle, without glancing up from his paper.

"Do the level, old pal," continued Weinstein; "it has my nanny! I feel like I was doing time."

• • •

It's Quiet in Fairview

"This country thing is just what you needed," continued Merkle. "You're looking better than you ever did in your life."

"Oh, I'm there with the fatal beauty all right," said Weinstein, rolling a cigarette, "but there ain't a skirt in town I'd fall for!" He sighed romantically.

"Ain't you lonesome for the big lane?" He turned on Merkle.

"Not me! I'm happier than I've been for a long while."

"You mean you're going to stick to this rank?" Weinstein looked incredulous.

"As long as the Lord lets me."

"Nothing like that in my family?" said Weinstein. "I'd rather be a ripple on Broadway than a whole tidal wave up here. And to think I came of my own free will!" He sighed as he contemplated his own idiocy.

"I thought you liked the place," commented Merkle.

"Why, there ain't even a moving picture show here!"

"That's the beauty of it. It's nice and quiet."

"Quiet? Say, Merkle, it's so quiet that when the mosquitoes buzz around my window pergisity and at least he spoke.

"Children" he asked of the small man on whose toes he was standing.

"No, sir," was the reply.

"Whee—wheel broke?" was his next query.

"No, sir," answered the little fellow. Silence then.

"Explosion?" came the next question.

"No, sir," said the shrunken one.

More silence.

"Smaller then?" he queried petulantly.

"Nothing, sir," meekly returned his victim.

"Nothing, 'smatter?" he ejaculated with a frown: "I'd known that I wouldn't get off."

"Guess he ain't got much to count," sneered Hezekiah.

"Guess again" replied Weinstein, blandly. "He only needs thirty cents to have a million dollars."

"Well," said Hezekiah, "I have a message for him, but perhaps you fellows will do as well. Mr. Belknap says that place you're going to put in the paper about him is criminal libel, and unless it's revised in the next issue, he'll have you all arrested."

Weinstein turned to Merkle. "Hand this guy a ruin check," he said.

"Just a shame the way my poor boy has to work," exclaimed Mrs. Wilson, looking severely at the unconscious Weinstein. "I can't even come home to supper on time. And he looks dreadful, too! Almost worn out!"

"I don't think he's looking so badly," said Merkle in surprise.

Mrs. Wilson swept the crumbs from the table, and cast a contemptuous look at her boarders.

"I wouldn't expect you to notice it," she retorted. "If some folks—she glanced at Weinstein—would do their share of the work my boy would get time to eat something. As it is he scarcely touches a thing but enough to keep a bird alive—he's that thrifty."

"Do I get anything to drink with this?" said Jos, looking sadly at a fragment of lettuce on his plate.

"I'll bring you some water," said Mrs. Wilson, shortly, as she gathered the dishes from the table and swept into the kitchen.

"Can you beat it?" said Weinstein, disgustedly. "Gee! I wish I was where I could use the lights!"

"Oh, stick it out!" said Merkle, without glancing up from his paper.

"Do the level, old pal," continued Weinstein; "it has my nanny! I feel like I was doing time."

It's Quiet in Fairview

"This country thing is just what you needed," continued Merkle. "You're looking better than you ever did in your life."

"Oh, I'm there with the fatal beauty all right," said Weinstein, rolling a cigarette, "but there ain't a skirt in town I'd fall for!" He sighed romantically.

"Ain't you lonesome for the big lane?" He turned on Merkle.

"Not me! I'm happier than I've been for a long while."

"You mean you're going to stick to this rank?" Weinstein looked incredulous.

"As long as the Lord lets me."

"Nothing like that in my family?" said Weinstein. "I'd rather be a ripple on Broadway than a whole tidal wave up here. And to think I came of my own free will!" He sighed as he contemplated his own idiocy.

Proof Positive

THERE once lived a man, and was like him may be living yet, who believed his wife when she said that she loved him more than she loved any creature on earth.

One night he fell sick, and being a man, naturally the solicitude of a woman, he thought to himself, "I will groan, and she will start up in her sleep, frightened to death that she is going to lose me.

So he groaned. But his wife slept on! Then he groaned louder and deeper, and still she slept. A groan followed that combined the roar of the lion with the wailing of the north wind, and still she slept.

Just then the baby gave a slight sigh in its sleep, and in an instant its mother was awake and on her feet beside its crib, looking down at it with wide-awake and anxious eyes.

And I believed her," said the man not without bitterness, "when she said she loved me most."

HOW TO DEVELOP THE BUST

Wonderful as it may seem we have found a simple, harmless way to develop the bust. It is Sesmar, the discovery of a well-known woman physician, who used it with remarkable success in treating her own bosom and then won the gratitude of scores of her patients.

If Sesmar does not enlarge the bust measurement from three to seven inches we guarantee to return the money paid for it. It will not only make you stay flat-chested and with unattractive form. Use Sesmar and get beautiful development just where you need it. This treatment is not recommended for anything but developing the bust, but is guaranteed to do this or money back. Full three months' treatment costs only $1.00 at the sole agents throughout the United States, or mail postpaid from the Sesmar Toilet Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Send

To-day's Best Story

HE was tall and he was lanky and he was politely inebriated. He pulled solemnly at a dead cigar as he boarded a crowded car at the corner of the Tremont House. He leaned limply against the railboard and gazed vacantly out into space over the heads of his fellow passengers. As the car jerked forward he lurched backward and split himself between the rails. He looked around him in a wrinkled perplexity and at last he spoke.

"Children" he asked of the small man on whose toes he was standing.

"No, sir," was the reply.

"Whee—wheel broke?" was his next query.

"No, sir," answered the little fellow. Silence then.

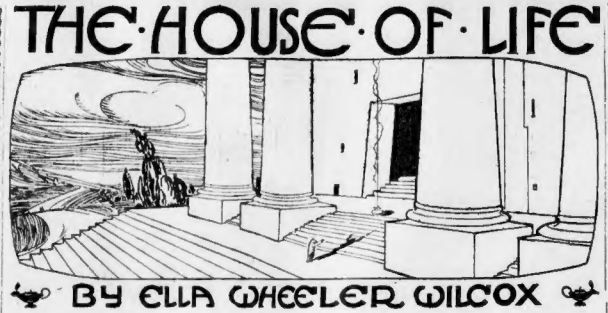
Freckle-Face

If the Summer Brought Out Unsightly Spots You Can Remove Them Easily.

Do you know how easy it is to remove those ugly spots so that no one will call you freckle-face? Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength, from Hoogkion & Dutton or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co, and one night's treatment will show you how easy it is to rid yourself of freckles and get a beautiful complexion.

Now that the summer has brought its crop of freckles to most women, there is an unusual demand for Othine and in October the druggist sometimes finds it difficult to get sufficient to supply all calls. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine, as it is said under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove the freckles.

THE·HOUSE·OF·LIFE



BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

ALL wondering and eager-eyed, within her portico,
I made my plea to Hostess Life, one morning long ago.
"Pray, show me this great house of thine, nor close a single door;
But let me wander where I will and climb from floor to floor,
For many rooms, and curious things, and treasures great and small
Within your spacious mansion lie, and I would see them all."
Then Hostess Life turned silently, her searching gaze on me,
And with no word, she reached her hand and offered up the key.
It opened first the door of Hope, and long I lingered there,
Until I spied the room of Dreams, just higher by a stair.
And then a door whereon the one word "Happiness" was writ,
But when I tried the little key, I could not make it fit.
It turned the lock of Pleasure's room where first all seemed so bright,
But after I had stayed a while it somehow lost its light.
And wandering down a lonely hall, I came upon a room
Marked "Duty," and I entered it, to lose myself in gloom.
Along the shadowy halls I groped my weary way about
And found that from dull Duty's room a door of Toil led out.
It led out to another door, whereon a crimson stain
Made sullenly against the dark, these words: "The Room of Pain."
But, oh, the light! the light! the light! that spilled down from above,
And upward wound the stairs of Faith, right to the tower of Love.
And when I came forth from that place, I tried the litle key,
And, lo! the door of Happiness swung open, wide and free.

CHAPTER XX.—(Continued)

"I COULD stand an encore on that pie," he said, pushing his plate toward Mrs. Wilson, who had just come in from the kitchen.

"I'm saving the rest for Tom," said Mrs. Wilson. "Huckleberry is his favorite. He'll be sorry when he was reading?" she inquired of Merkle.

"He'll be along pretty soon," said Merkle.

He stayed at the office to straighten things up."

"Land sakes! I'm ashamed the way my poor boy has to work," exclaimed Mrs. Wilson, looking severely at the unconscious Weinstein. "I can't even come home to supper on time. And he looks dreadful, too! Almost worn out!"

"I don't think he's looking so badly," said Merkle in surprise.

Enter, Mr. Jenks

Without the ceremony of knocking Mr. Hezekiah Jenks appeared at the street door.

"Hello, Josh," said Weinstein. "What's the big noise?"

"Mr. Belknap sent me over to see Tom Wilson," said Hezekiah, sullenly. "Where is he?"

"Over at the office, counting his money," grinned Weinstein.

"We need it badly," agreed Tom.

But Weinstein dissented. Here was real money, enough to go back home with. His wanted to see how it felt in his pocket.

"Nix on that improvement stuff," he said. "As for the big dividend—"

"I hate to disappoint you, Joe," said Tom, "but I think we ought to enlarge the sheet as soon as possible. The fact that we have been able to make good with the old stuff shows what we could do with an up-to-date press. We could make it twice as big and throw off twice as many."

"That's the dope," said Merkle, with enthusiasm: "I'm with the kid."

"You guys give me a pain," said Weinstein. "We work our heads off and pile up four hundred bucks and now you want to put it into some more junk."

"I'll pay for itself in no time," said Tom.

"Correct thing you know," corroborated Merkle.

"All right," said Weinstein, wearily, "I can see myself hoeing it for home on the trucks."

Two-Thirds Vote Rules.

"How do you suppose he's going to eat if you talk to him all the time?" said Mrs. Wilson, who had brought in more dishes for Tom to sample. "No wonder he's getting thin!"

"Now, mother"—began Tom.

"I won't say another word, dear," she said. "Only I do wish you would look after your health. Would you like some cold tea?"

"Just a glass of water," said Tom, and his mother hastened to get it for him.

Pretty Cook Objected

SHE DIDN'T REQUIRE HIS ADVICE

By KENNETT HARRIS

"DON'T mind me, Evelina," said the grocery boy, seating himself and picking up a family story paper that the pretty cook had tucked into a recess of the kitchen cabinet. "I'll be improving my mind while you're fixing that there goo." What is it, anyway? Custard?"

"Your mind?" answered the pretty cook. "I guess so. Custard or mush, one of the two."

"I guess it's good enough for the grocery business," said the boy, philosophically. "I don't have to cook. This must be a hot story, by the picture. Lemme see you, Evelina, did you ever see a real girl with a waist like that? You've got some waist yourself, but a fellow would know it when he had his arm around it."

"He certainly would," remarked the pretty cook. "If he didn't, he'd be reminded of it in short order."

"I wish I could afford to wear clothes like this here Willie," resumed the grocery boy, as he turned a page. "I've got good clothes, but they haven't got the class to 'em these have. Just look at 'em."

"I can't make said dressing and look at nineteen both," said the pretty cook.

"The milkman ain't got anything like 'em, either," said the grocery boy. "I seen him out with you Thursday evening an' he didn't look nothing like this. I ain't going to say what he did look like because I might hurt your feelings. But you ought to see that there's a difference yourself."

He Could Keep Still

"Do you think you could keep your mouth closed until I get ready to attend to you?" asked the pretty cook, tartly.

"I should say I could," replied the grocery boy. "It ain't no trouble to me to keep still. I can set for an hour at a time and not say a word, if I happen to take the notion. Some people can't. I had an uncle that used to talk in his sleep, but it never run in the family. If I see that it makes a person sore to hear me expressing myself, I quit right then and there and stay quit.

"I'd rather listen to someone else anyway, although they tell me I've got a nice voice. I'd never make a good monologue artist in vaudeville. I'm all right on a come-back, but I'm poor at starting anything in the line of conversation. When I've got the general condition of the weather and a forecast for to-morrow off my chest, I seemed to be satisfied. It ain't because I'm bashful, but just on account of having sense. You don't mind if I turn back to you, Evelina, do you?"

"Why?" asked the pretty cook.

"On account of the salad dressing," replied the grocery boy. "I hate to embarrass it. Seems to me you ought to have a dressing room for it."

Just Friendly Advice

"Somebody'll have a padded room for you some of these days," retorted the pretty cook, laying down her fork and dish. "Now you can bring me a half a pound of Smyrna figs, a dozen eggs—fresh ones, a bottle of tomato catsup, a big can of corn, a gallon of kerosene and—got any mushrooms?"

"No mushrooms, no dressing rooms and no padded rooms," replied the grocery boy. "We've got rough-on-rosches, if you want to poison anything. That's the best I can do for you. We've just got in a barrel of beer that's better'n a bottle let me bring up a gallon of that. It tastes better than the kerosene and smells better."

"I'm giving this order," the pretty cook reminded him.

"I thought you'd say something like that," said the grocery boy. "It was just a little friendly advice, though, so you oughtn't to get mad about it."

"You're like a fellow I know that was going to get married. He was kind of new to the business, so I thought I'd give him a tip. I told him I knew a girl who had more style to her in a minute than the one he'd picked would get in a thousand years, besides playing the piano and being twice the looker, and I was willing to bet he could cop her out easy. He told me he guessed he knew about what he wanted, or words to that effect. Of course I know that sweet cider ain't good to fill lamps with and it's poor stuff to use to kindle fire, so you may be right about it."

"And a three-pound pail of lard," said the pretty cook.

"Some folks use butter for shortening," suggested the grocery boy, "but then you may want it to make cold cream, so excuse me if I'm wrong. I'm just trying to help you out, that's all.

"Let me tell you something," said the pretty cook, reaching for the broom, "if you don't get out, I'll help you out right now."

HOW MEN FALL IN LOVE

IN the case of men propinquity account perhaps for some of the most oddly assorted couples. If a man sees a woman at regular intervals for any length of time she becomes a habit, and the moment he becomes conscious of the habit he usually proposes, preferring to take the ills he thinks he knows rather than those he wots not of. Here again the cloak of habit obscures from him the fact that she dresses badly and is proportionately jealous of other women that even if she did do her hair with rather less severity and in a wooden transformaton she could never be either attractive of punctual. If she make him really comfortable the cloak may never fall, and they count as a happily married couple.

Less material grounds are that the girl may have a knack for sentiment, the man for romance. For how many engagements are the moon and a rich baritone responsible? For how many more a pair of earrings or a curl on the lapel of the coat? I know of one engagement that was entirely due to a hunting accident. The man broke his arm out hunting, and in the hall caused by the consequent and unwilling suspension of his activities the girl found his sling perfectly irresistible. If a man is going out to India for a term of years he nearly always makes a point of proposing the night before he starts, and the girl nearly always accepts him. Absence does not always make the heart grow fonder, but the thought of absence invariably incites it to momentary aberration.—From London Truth.

Oh, the villain! He's running away with Rosamond against her will. Claude is in hot pursuit, but he'd better be careful. That cannon may be loaded, and Desmond is a desperate man.

It IS loaded. Why doesn't Rosamond holler to Claude and warn him of his peril? Tush! Tush! Don't you know it isn't ladylike to holler? And Rosamond is a real lady, if there ever was one.

Hooray for Lars the Lumberjack! He has rolled a giant oak log in the path of the cannon ball. Claude will remember this service to his dying day. If he ever gets time, he'll buy Lars a brand-new axe.

Now, then! Desmond is out of ammunition, and Claude fears him no longer. Not that he ever did fear Desmond, but still, a loaded cannon gives a man quite some advantage in a fight.

Did you see Desmond jump from the gun carriage to the horse's back, carrying off the long Rosamond with him? Of course you dosamond send him the money? She will didn't. It isn't in the picture. Never mind, though, that's what he's done. Ain't he Claude a christmas present. Yes, there will be more pictures

The Laughing Satyr

The Story of a Studio Murder Mystery, from "The Veil of Clay," by Meta Simmins

(Copyright in America by London Daily Mail, 1910.)

NINTH INSTALMENT

JARDINE was: the absolute directness of her attack had taken him by surprise and oddly enough the dominant thought in his mind at the moment was a sensation curiously akin to satisfaction. He had not misjudged Fleury—the girl also had read accusation, not reassurance, into the man's tardily uttered words.

"Mr. Jardine. * * *" Before he was aware of the significance of her action, the girl had leaned forward and flashed on the light; he forced her, momentarily bewildered by the soft radiance that was almost blinding after the fire-lit gloom. "It's true, then, it's true," she cried. "They do suspect you! Oh, that anyone could be so wicked, so cruel!"

"Miss Charters, why are you exciting yourself so?"

"Don't speak to me. * * * I want to think. * * *" She put up her hands to her face for a moment. "You don't understand. If they suspect you. * * *" The hands dropped and her eyes met his with an almost frightened look. * * *

"If you are in any danger—I must speak—because I—am guilty—I did it—I killed him—"

For a moment her meaning hardly dawned on him, then with horror-stricken exclamation he moved towards her.

"Miss Charters what madness is this?" He gripped her wrists, looking steadily into her eyes, striving by a sheer effort of will to break the spell of memory working in her. "You know that it is madness—"

"It's the truth; I killed him." Her voice rang out almost shrilly, though with awed and shy he urged her to silence. "Oh, you can't deceive me again—you can't lure me back to false security to-night as you did once before downstairs when, at the sight of the cat, everything came back to me! It came back to me again to-night when I crossed the threshold of this room—I remembered everything."

Shudderingly she pressed her hands again to her eyes, as though to shut out that mental vision.

"Heaven knows it wasn't premeditated * * *" she cried, "even yet I don't understand how it happened * * *" But I remember, I held the knife in my hand and the body lay there—just there! * * * I can see the upturned, awful sneering face now * * * the outflung arm with the bangle on its wrist * * *"

"Miss Charters—believe me, it's all a horrible dream."

Her Memory Fails

"I have tried to think that; but now I am awake and I know." She turned to him with an almost pitiful eagerness, almost like one who hoped for contradiction.

"You were not here," she said swiftly; "it was not possible for you to have done it. The room was empty * * * quite empty, only the body—the body lying there."

Her voice faltered to silence. She put up her hand to her head wearily. Jardine looked at her gripped to silence by the horror and tragedy of the scene. She looked so young, so fragile, in the long, straight folds of the robe that the light revealed as softle blue—like the Madonna of some majestically simple conception. It was inconceivable that what she said was true.

"But before——" he broke out eagerly. There was a new note in his voice, the light of a dawning idea in his eyes. "Can you remember nothing before you saw the body, Miss Chambers? I hate to have to ask you these questions—but what happened? Try to tell me—so much depends upon it. Did Stuvesant insult you—was there a quarrel?"

"I don't know * * * I can remember nothing. I've tried—al my illness seemed to be struggling to pierce the veil," she cried despairingly. "It is no arrange, for everything else is so clear! My coming here . . . . everything. I can see the body—its very position—and the cat——"

"Not Guilty," His Verdict.

"Look here, Miss Charters," Jardine interrupted her with a rough vehemence. "It's ridiculous. You're no more guilty of Stuvesant's death than I am. There's some horrible veil of mystery that neither you nor I can pierce. Only—you did not do this thing—you must be certain of that!"

He spoke with conviction. The girl spoke the truth—she could remember nothing from the moment he had seen her with the knife held in her hand. She had come out of the room roused by a fall or a cry * * * she was not guilty.

How had he ever been mad enough to entertain the thought of her guilt? It seemed a preposterous enough thought looking at her now. Even without that overwhelming evidence in her favor—the removal of the body while she lay sick in the flat below—he ought to have known it was not possible she could have been guilty of murder. * * *

"Who else could have done it? We were alone in the flat."

Beatrice put the question with a calmness bordering on despair. Her eyes filled with a sudden mist of tears, and she turned away.

Defying the Shadows

"How good you have been to me," she cried brokenly. "I can't understand it—when any other man would have turned aloof. Oh, the bitterness of it—to wakes, as it were, from sleep, and know that, all unconsciously, one is stained—stained irrevocably! And yet, surely in the sight of Heaven I am not guilty * * * for I did not know. Oh, it wasn't my fault—may it wasn't my fault * * *"

Her broken cry, like the cry of a child aghast at its first revelation of pain, fell into Jardine's heart like a pain. He looked at her standing there. Her fault? Of what was she guilty, save of that youth and beauty which had inflamed the dead man to the pursuit of her—that had scourged her to the edge of the cliff and thence to this moment of her agony?

Almost before he knew whither his impulse carried him he was at her side. His arms closed round her, holding her close, as close as though he defied even the shadow of the past to creep between them now.

"Your fault!" His voice surely must have told her all that she craved in hour of comfort and reassurance. "Your fault, Beatrice! And if it were—what would it matter? I love you. * * *"

"I Love You!"

"I love you * * *" He felt on fire with the love of her. She must have felt the mad hammering of his heart against her own, for surely some of his madness passed into her heart and made there a tumult of joy that for the moment utterly outrolled all the fear and horror that had rioted there. She clung to him, he felt her fingers tighten, her eyes looked up into his dreamy with all the mystery and wonder of love newborn.

His lips touched hers, but they did not press them, for, with a cry, she broke away from him.

"What are you saying? What have you done? You have almost made me forget——"

"You must forget——" He seemed to see her slipping from him back into the ugly gray distances of the place of fears. "You must forget." He caught her hands and held them tightly, though she strained away from him with a terrified shrinking.

"You love me—your eyes tell me that," he whispered. "Dear—give me the right to take you away out of this gloom and sadness into the light and the air and the sun! In all this great city of love-lorn is there another man or woman as lonely as you or I—Beatrice? You were sent into my lonely life, out of my City of Illusions * * * that I might give you my happiness."

For a moment she almost yielded, almost suffered him to draw her once again within the shelter of his arms, but she did not yield. She drew away from him with a desolate cry.

The Future's Spectre

"Don't you know what I am—that I have a man's blood on my hands? * * *"

"Beatrice, can't you trust me—I tell you this is madness." It isn't possible that you could have done this thing * * * listen * * *"

All the old arguments over and over again, convincing himself afresh, but leaving her utterly untouched.

"What does it matter that I cannot remember—what does my inability to remember prove? I hated him * * * hated him and wished him dead * * * oh, there is no doubt at all in my mind that I killed him * * * for I killed him before in thought * * *"

"And if you had killed him, as I know beyond all doubt that you did not, but even if you were guilty—do you think that it would matter to me?" Jardine whispered. "Do you think that for an moment it would stand between you and be-Beatrice? I want you for my wife."

"It might not come between is now," she whispered, "but afterwards * * * the ugly stain creeping out, creeping and staining not only ourselves * * * not only ourselves." Her voice trailed away into indistinctness and her eyes seemed to hold a vision of the future she dreaded. "Oh, don't try to argue with me—for though for the moment I might yield—because I love you—not because of that love I know that if danger threatens you I must speak—tell all I know."

"And ruin me utterly, Beatrice."

He looked at her hopelessly; how could he explain to her the house of cards he had built, explain his contentment of the body that so irretrievably enmeshed him as in the web of guilt itself? And yet even if again he was to save him girl from the heroic folly she meditated.

The Dead Hand

"Beatrice, I did not kill Stuvesant, you believe that—and yet I am as hopelessly involved as though I had all the intens and purposes I am accessory after the fact—I concealed the body."

He told the story briefly, stirring its horror—and yet as she spoke he could feel the sweat breaking out in little beads on brow and lip.

"You did this thing for me?"

Beatrice faced him, her breast rising and falling. "For me?" and her voice had an exquisite caressing cadence that was reward enough were all his fears proved realities.

"What have I done? I only speak to show that If you do what you propose you ruin not yourself, but me."

"Oh, don't, don't!" Then, as her voice broke query, he drew a step toward her and drew her restlessly into his arms, where she lay for an instant sobbing with the unrestrained violence that wrung his heart.

"Oh, how cruel the world is," she sobbed. "How cruel! Living it seemed as though he had drawn us together—but for him I should never have known you, and because of that I had forgiven him! And now dead, he lies between us—separating us—separating us!"

"What d'you mean?" A startled note beat in Jardine's voice, the arms that held her shook.

"Oh, don't you understand?" she whispered. "Don't you see that until we know—until everything is clear—we can never be anything to each other, never—never?"

And though Jardine soothed and comforted her, contradicting her with all a lover's arguments, his lips against her hair, he seemed to know with a not to be doubted prescience that she spoke the truth; that this embrace in which she clung so closely to him for that moment was the embrace in which she was taking her farewell of him and of love.

TO PREVENT OILY SKIN

WHEN one's skin is oily do not try to conceal it by excessive use of powder. It makes the face pasty and clogs the pores.

There are various drying lotions that are excellent for this condition. Wiping off the face with pure alcohol has a drying effect on the skin. Various good lotions are sold for this purpose, but a teaspoonful of borax in a basin of water is excellent.

If you fear pure borax try this lotion: One tablespoonful of powdered borax, two tablespoonfuls of glycerin and a quart of camphor water. Dip a soft linen in this and mop the face several times a day.

Do not make the mistake of using spirits of camphor, which is diluted in alcohol and much stronger. Camphor water is made by letting two ounces of gum camphor stand in water for twenty-four hours. The lump can be used repeatedly as its size is little decreased.

Jack o' Lantern

By EDEN PHILLPOTTS

WHERE the dim marish oozes out and fills
The lap of the hills,
While drowser gloom brools deep upon the wold,
They keep their place and take their troubling flight
And fringe the night
With pallid flowers of azure and faint gold

Along the darkness elfin lanterns flicker,
Now slow, now quicker—
A pale corona set upon the mire.
They float and fly and leap and sink together
Upon one tether,
Where ancient fens exercs their lambent fire.

This, shaking, blue—spectres of flame they travel
And break and ravel,
Then fade and flash again and fade again
They wave their lamps upon the quag; they quiver
And sope and shiver
And flit, like little ghosts, above the plain.

Born from the heavy breath of sleeping Earth,
In fowide mirth
They trail and sink and wander, rise and fall;
Then, shuddering before the chill of day,
Soon speed away.
Blow out their lights and vanish, one and all.

O, futile fires! the counterpart are ye
Of most that we
Toil for our prizes, gather for our goal;
While overhead the steadfast stars still burn,
Reckon and yearn
And shine their challenge to the human soul.

WASHING LINEN

THE best way to wash a skirt of linen colored linen is to plunge it into water in which a handful or two of bay has been boiled.

When the skirt has been washed in the prepared water which should be only warm, not hot, when used with good white soap—it must be thoroughly rinsed and hung in the air to dry. If a little stiffening and gloss are desired two tablespoonfuls of starch should be added to the rinse water, and the skirt should be ironed while damp.

SOCIETY IN BERKSHIRES FOR THE AUTUMN HUNTS

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Up Berkshire way the hunting season is in the middle, early even before the down, like the worm in the proverb, and women as well as men are successfully taking high fences, long runs and incidental silo getting up appetite for the hunt breakfasts which are coming to be a feature of the Autumn festivities in that region. With so much exercise in the crisp morning air, what wonder that the women of the Berkshire hunting set have complexions as pink and white as their cousins, peaches of British birth and figures lithe and graceful.

Many entries have been made for the Berkshire Hunt Horse Show, at Glendale, Foster's estate at Bellefontaine on Saturday, October 15. Some from the pony class have come from William P. O. Field. Miss Mary Turnure, Strand Foster, Jr., Donald Frothingham and Yates Satterlee. Hunters have been entered by Miss Dorcella Barnes, Girlwold Burden and Chas. S. Bird, Jr. In the class for saddle horses will be those of the Misses Constance Polsom and Kate Cary and Messrs Robb De Peyster Potter, Girard Foster and Samuel Frothingham. Prior to the show Mr. and Mrs. Foster will entertain at the Farmers' Club, a country house whose grounds the active members of the Hunt ride to hounds.

Mrs. Joseph B. Warner of Boston has arrived at Stockbridge, where she has leased a villa for the remaining weeks of Autumn.

Mrs. Allen Curtis and Miss Curtis arrived from New York late in the week after a visit there, and are again at their villa on Oak street, Beverly Farms, where they will remain until after Thanksgiving.

Herbert M. Sears and his daughters Miss Lillian and Miss Phyllis Sears, have been spending a week in New York. The Searses are still at their Pride's Cross Farm estate, "Wood Rock," where they will remain until the last of the month, when they will open their town house for the season. Miss Sears is to make her debut at a ball which her father is to give in her honor in December in Boston.

Mrs. Charles H. Dunkiow of Brookline and her interesting family of little daughters are remaining at "Windhurst," their Summer home at Manchester indefinitely. The George L. Watsons are still at their Manchester estate, "Sinkingdune," and plan to remain there until after Thanksgiving.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander S. Porter, Jr., who arrived late in the week in Newport, from their trip abroad are now at Manchester where they will remain for several weeks prior to opening their house in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Lyman of Beacon street, who spent the Summer at Jamestown, R. I., have closed their villa there, and have since been guests of Miss Annie Lyman at Newport.

Mrs. Charles H. Fairchild and Miss Sallie Fairchild attended their Newport season the past week and returned to their home in Cambridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Simpkins are planning to keep their Beverly Farms cottage open all Winter as they did last year, going for a part of the time to Washington.

Mrs. Charles H. Dalton has returned from her Beverly Farms estate and is settled for the Winter in her fine house on Commonwealth avenue.

Mr and Mrs. Henry H. Thorndike have closed their cottage at Bar Harbor and are again in town.

Mrs. Russell Sturgis and her daughters, Miss Gertrude, Miss Carola and Miss Frances Sturgis and her son Russell Sturgis, who spent the Summer at Coppedello, have returned to their town house on Fairfield street. The two young Sturgis girls are numbered among the debutantes of the coming season.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Beal are remaining later than usual at their Beverly estate on Borgens Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Preston Gibson are planning to close their North Shore season the middle of October and open their house in Washington. Judge and Mrs. Oliver Wendell Holmes have already closed their estate at Beverly Farms and returned to their home in Washington.

The Frederick Cunninghams have closed their season at Newport and are again at their home in Longwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ward have sent out cards for the marriage of their daughter, Ida Estelle, to Arthur Walker Bonsell, on Wednesday evening, Oct. 12, at 8 o'clock in the First Universalist Church, Cambridge.

Mr. and Mrs. James Cummings Barr of Beacon street, returned Saturday from a hunting trip in Maine. Mr. and Mrs. Barr left town again yesterday for New York, where they will visit friends for two weeks.

A DICTIONARY WORTH WHILE FOR COUPONS

The most valuable reference book which can be had to-day by people of all ages is Webster's Condensed Dictionary, which contains about 50,000 words in general use and much other data of the greatest value to students, to business men and to everybody who can read or write. The contents of this book are invaluable to all who wish to read or write or speak correctly and make a good impression on those with whom they have business or social relations.

This dictionary is one of the most helpful books in the world. No student, outside of purely technical or professional lines, will be likely to find a single word which it does not contain and teach how to pronounce and spell as well as give its meaning.

Valuable as Reference.

Because the dictionary is new, is easy reference, is compact and of handy form, is established as a ready-cited condensation of the famous Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, the standard authority of the Boston Public Schools, would editors of the BOSTON AMERICAN subscribe to it as the most valuable of all reference books for the readers of the AMERICAN.

Every reader of the BOSTON AMERICAN is entitled to a copy of this book. They are offered to the reading public in three different forms, besides coupons of three nominal amounts, besides coupons of consecutive numbers printed in the AMERICAN. For those who wish to obtain one of these books without delay the plan is made as follows:

For No. 1—Complete in every way and bound in flexible leather. Seven consecutive dailies and one Sunday AMERICAN, five cents.

For No. 2—Complete in every way and bound in flexible leather. Seven consecutive dailies and one Sunday AMERICAN, five cents.

For No. 3—Complete in the same respects as are the others, and amplified with charts with colored maps, and the newest file of words in the cents.

Will Be Sent by Mail.

The dictionary coupons will be found on page 6 of the Daily and Sunday AMERICAN, and readers begin to collect on any day to collect the seven that are requisite to obtain a copy of the dictionary. But they should bear in mind that the coupons must be saved in numbered order on seven consecutive days. For the convenience of readers who may find the time too short to call at the Dictionary Department at No. 272 Devonshire street they will be sent by mail or any other manner of forwarding cash to pay postage to those who forward by mail the last set of coupons and the cash.

It is impossible to obtain an education without a thorough and comprehensive knowledge of the words in common use in the English language. To learn them it is not necessary to go to college. Everybody who can read at all can obtain one of these dictionaries and gain possession of a vocabulary which will be of lifelong service in work or skills in society. One of these books will be found the basis for a study or comment that is to be a time basis for a useful education.

Useful in Every Home.

There should be one of them in every home for the sake of the children. Boys and girls going to school will learn how to spell and pronounce correctly many of the complaints that is being almost universally made now is that children leave school deficient in ability to spell. The best penmanship and a correct choice of words counts for little in correspondence if words are misspelled. It matters not how conscientious, can give a pupil such a thorough course in spelling as a full can obtain from Webster's condensed Dictionary. There is an old saying, "Knowledge is power." All the power which comes from knowledge can be obtained by getting a Webster's Dictionary through the BOSTON AMERICAN.

LIQUOR DEALER IN PULPIT DECLARES SALOONS MUST GO

The saloon as a proposition is undoubtedly the most dangerous part of the liquor traffic. Seventy-five per cent. of the evils connected with the liquor business can be traced directly to the saloon. The drink evil must be exterminated. Economic necessity now demands it. No longer is it a moral issue. Moral suasion and restrictive legislation will solve the liquor problem.—George B. Hugo, liquor dealer, from the pulpit of Maverick Congregational church.

LIQUOR DEALER SCORES SALOON

George B. Hugo, whose family has been in the liquor trade for three generations, and who himself is one of the largest bottlers in this state, declared as a speaker in the pulpit of the Maverick Congregational church in East Boston that the drink evil must be exterminated and that it is due to the existence of the criminal saloon. He said the retail and wholesale liquor trades should be separated, and that the sale of liquor in places where no food was served with it ought not to be permitted under the law.

Intemperance was not to be prevented by prohibition, he thought, and the saloon, which was the product of centuries, could not be wiped out, as zealous sentimentalist imagined, with one blow. He derided the saying that the saloon is "the poor man's club" and said it was a poor club for any poor man to belong to. He said saloon keepers should not be taken seriously in the argument that shutting up saloons is interference with personal liberty.

"Putting down the gates of a railroad crossing interferes with personal liberty," he said. "So does compulsory vaccination, but both are necessary to protect the individual. Society has the same right to prevent contagion and the evil results of drunkenness."

He said economic necessity demanded the extermination of the drink evil for the protection of morality had its root on economic foundations to be permanent.

NANCE O'NEIL IS BACK IN BOSTON

Nance O'Neil, spoken of as the foremost American actress, has returned to Boston after an absence of about three years, to star in David Belasco's production of "The Lily." Miss O'Neil is delighted at this return to Boston, where people like to claim that one was first recognized as a great actress. Her first words were, "The first thing I want you to do is to tell the people of Boston how glad I am to be back here, and how especially glad I am to be under Mr. Belasco's management, and in a play like this."

"I feel as though I were coming to people that I know and that know me, when I come to Boston. I used to live here, you know, and up in three years ago, used to act here."

Miss O'Neil was enthusiastic about the play. The Lily, which ran for five months in New York last Winter, and for seven weeks this Fall. "I do not believe that I have ever played in a more wonderful play," she declared. "I never played one part for so long before. You know I have been playing this part for over six months now."

SEEK MISSING MAN WHO SHOT LODGER

Peter Gallo went by mistake to the tenement on the floor above his own at No. 52 Charter street, North End, and trying to open the door with his key, was mistaken for a burglar by an Italian, who opened the door suddenly and shot Gallo in the left side near the heart. Gallo was hurried to the Relief Station, where he is in a critical condition. The police sounded a general alarm for the apprehension of Giuseppi Amato, the owner of the house, who immediately disappeared after the shooting.

IRISH VISITORS AT THE THEATRE

As guests of John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, John F. Redmond, Joseph Devlin and Daniel Boyle, the distinguished Irish visitors, and a dozen representative Bostonians, who have aided in their reception and entertainment, will witness the performance of the American comedy, "The Fortune Hunter," to-night. For many years Mr. Redmond and Mr. Schoeffel have been close personal friends and this theatre party break in the regular program is in kind of return for a visit recently paid the Irishman by the American who Mr. Schoeffel was in Ireland.

FRICK CANCELS BIG GIFT TO PITTSBURG

PITTSBURG, Oct. 10.—Somewhat of a sensation was caused in inner political circles here when it became known that Henry Clay Frick, had suddenly changed his mind and withdrawn a proposed gift to the city of 300 acres of land. No reasons were assigned by Mr. Frick for his unexpected action. But it was stated by friends that he had been ready for some time past to turn over the acreage, valued at half a million dollars. As the city could not guarantee it would be immediately put to park purpose if has been withdrawn.

MONAHAN IS DENIED EGG WARRANT AGAIN

Former Senator George F. Monahan appeared before Judge Preble in the Charlestown district court to-day and asked for a warrant for the arrest of a young man upon the charge of hitting him with an egg, thrown during a parade just prior to the Congressional primaries. The warrant was refused. Councilor L. Carney went with Mr. Monahan to apply for the warrant. Previously, Court Clerk Mark Smith had refused to grant the warrant on the ground of insufficient evidence. Then an application for it made to Judge Bragg had the same result. Judge Preble's decision was the same.

BATTLESHIPS HERE FOR COLUMBUS DAY

The battleships Michigan, Captain Usher, and the Nebraska, Captain Newton, are at the Charlestown Navy Yard. The battleship Rhode Island, Captain Griffin, and the Virginia, Captain Gleason, are expected to reach port to-day. The crews of each of the battleships will participate in the Columbus Day parade on Wednesday. The Michigan is to be put in the dry-dock at Charlestown for repairs.

DANISH SCHOONER LOST.

NORTH SYDNEY, N. S., Oct. 10.—A dispatch from St. John's says that the Danish schooner Kronen parted her anchors, at Bonavista, during a gale, and was carried on the rocks and totally wrecked. The crew was rescued by Bonavista fishermen.

BASLE WANTS A MATCH RACE WITH OLDFIELD

The big German S. P. A., with Charlie Basle driving, is the combination which has challenged Barney Oldfield, driver of that famous 200-horsepower "Blitzen" Benz, to a match race at the coming speed carnival at Readville next Friday afternoon.

To vanquish the speed king is the one ambition of all of New England's high class motor pilots. Basle's challenge is only one of a number and if Oldfield would attempt to race every driver that has challenged him to a match at Readville next Friday afternoon, he would be forced to drive several hundred miles.

Basle's claims are founded on good performance in the past, he having become one of America's foremost drivers at the wheel of the Mercedes and Benz. He has been out with a challenge to Barney for several weeks, and should the meet at Readville Friday it will be the culmination of a long fend.

The match race, Barney Oldfield vs. Charlie Basle, will be the premier motor event of the year. Two greater motor pilots have never met in the past years to race on America's tracks and the interest of the motor world will shift to Readville on Friday, the 14th.

Basle has sent the wheels of the giant S. P. A. to the Michelin factory for a fast rim put on, in anticipation of Oldfield's acceptance of the challenge. Although seasoned and hardened through competition in the chief motor car sporting events, he is exhilarated over the possibility of his getting a chance at his speed crown at Readville.

GOVERNOR TO GREET CHURCH DELEGATES

The National Congregational Council, which opens in the Old South Church, Copley Square, to-night, and will be in session for five days, will be welcomed by Governor Draper in behalf of the State and by Mayor Fitzgerald in behalf of the city. Delegates of the Massachusetts ministers will be given by the Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park Street church. The response will be made by Rev. Edmund H. McMillan, a member of the Illinois Legislature.

Of importance in the conference of business will be the election of a moderator, Rev. Dr. Joseph Hutchins, formerly pastor of the Union church, this city, but now pastor of the Clinton Ave. church, Brooklyn, is the choice of the majority of the delegates. He is popular with all denominations and is thoroughly acquainted with the denomination, its traditions, its spirit and its work.

BROOKLINE GIRLS ARE ON THE 'HIKE'

"Hiking" is the very latest fad of Brookline girls. A dozen pretty, young girls living in the Coolidge Corner district have organized a pedestrian club and each morning the girls are all on a long hike before breakfast. One of the girls, just on [illegible] exercise after all walking. She is interested her friends and ow each morning they cover several miles before school. The organizers of the club are Miss Ethel Wetson, Miss Gertrude Lock, Miss Rosalie Schneider, Miss Evelyn Hyneman, Miss Helen Myers and Miss Beam White. The pedestrians have been walking in walking suits, stout walking boots, sweaters and broad brimmed sailor hats.

OPEN WORLD HUMANE SESSION AT CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 10.—The first international humane conference held in the United States opened at the New National Museum to-day. An address by the president, Dr. William O. Stillman of Albany, N. Y., outlined a world-wide program for the anti-cruelists. It related chiefly to the conservation and protection of the child. One of the distinctive features of the congress is the international exhibit of humane devices in the national museum. Nearly all the anti-cruelty societies in the United States are contributed and not a few from foreign countries.

HERE'S NEW WAY TO CATCH SWORDFISH

Drowning them is the latest way to catch swordfish. John Williams and A. J. Walsh of the fishing schooner Regina have the swordfish to prove it. The fish are brought to T Wharf. The fish was dead. You can't bring a swordfish anywhere till he is dead. Walsh and Williams were trawling off Brown's Bank. They came up the swordfish, tangled in the lines. There was a stiff breeze. The men were, How? They say "We drowned him." The swordfish didn't like being drowned. In the mix-up he cracked a plank in the bottom of the dory.

5,000 BLUEJACKETS NOW IN THIS PORT

The battleships Rhode Island and Nevada arrived to-day at the Charlestown Navy Yard from the inner waters of the Virginia coast. The Michigan and Montana arrived last week and before them came the New Jersey, the Indiana and the scout cruisers Chester and Salem. There are about 5,000 United States bluejackets now in this port and many of them will appear in the Columbus Day parade. The ships are here for minor repairs and will stay about a month.

MAN RESCUED FROM BROKEN POWER BOAT

HULL, Oct. 10.—Overcome from exposure all night in a broken down power boat, Charles Holbrook was picked up to-day in Hull bay by John Clawson, caretaker of the Burrage hospital. Holbrook belongs on Peddocks Island, where he is employed by John Irwin. He went out in the power boat late yesterday afternoon in search of another boat, when his boat broke down.

FISHERMEN CLAIM CREDIT OF RESCUE

Claims of police officers to the effect that they saved Mary Taylor from drowning at Commercial point recently, is disputed by William Holden and Peter Burns of the fishing boat Regina. They assert that they pulled the woman out of the water, and then worked over her, the other had to go to Station 8, before the police got wind of the woman's plight.

FINED FOR OVERSPEEDING.

In the Quincy District Court to-day the Milton police charged six automobilists with overspeeding while going to the Brockton fair. The following pleaded nolo and were each assessed $10 for costs: Patrick J. Hayes, Louis A. Silfies, Frederick A. Stetson and Edward Callahan of Boston and Walter Lothrarit of Lynn.

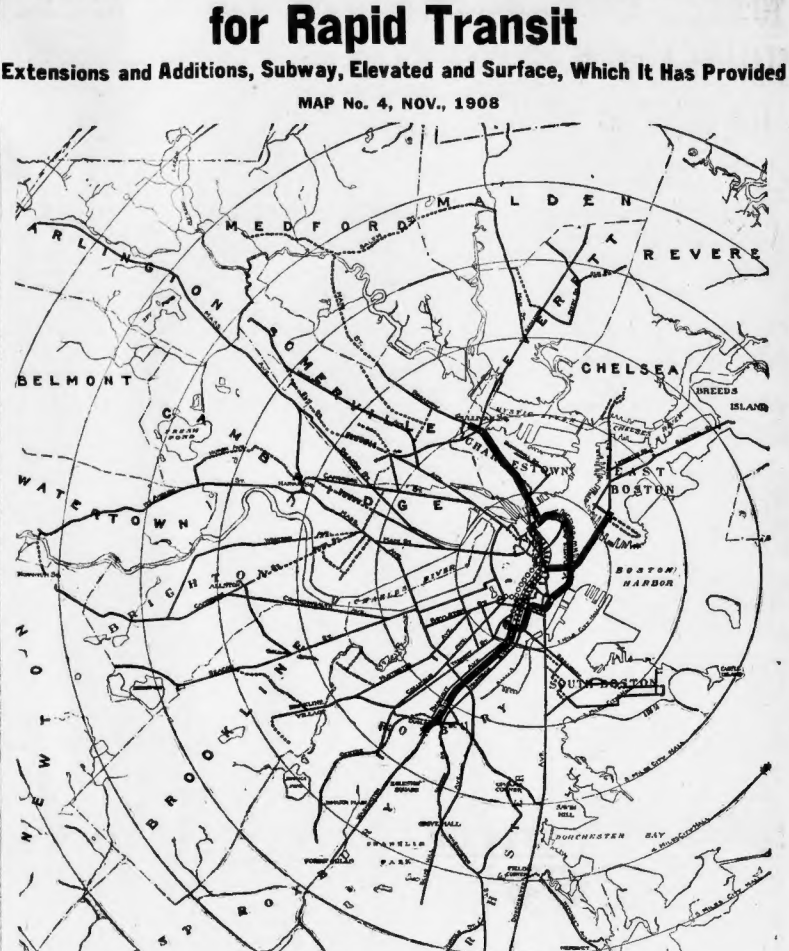
FREDERICK TOPPIN RESIGNS

Frederick Toppin has resigned as director of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, owing to change of his office from this city to New York. He was elected to the board at formation of the new chamber and has been the representative on it of the International Mercantile Marine Company.

What the Boston Elevated Has Done for Rapid Transit

Extensions and Additions, Subway, Elevated and Surface, Which It Has Provided

MAP No. 4, NOV., 1908



From map of Boston & Suburbs, Copyright, Geo. H. Walker & Co., Walker Lith. & Pub. Co.

The Boston Elevated Railway Company is showing the additions and extensions which it has made to its system. On September 28 was shown the surface lines and the Tremont Street Subway as in January, 1898. This was when the Boston Elevated took charge. On October 3 there was shown in addition the original elevated system. On October 5 was shown the East Boston Tunnel.

To the above is now added the Washington Street Tunnel shown thus [III]

The crooked spine of the elevated system was STRAIGHTENED by the completion of the WASHINGTON STREET TUNNEL.

Then the Tremont Street Subway was restored to its originally intended use—surface cars.

By the tunnel, the running time from Dudley Street to Sullivan Square, cut from 45 MINUTES TO 21, was still further cut from 21 to 18½ MINUTES.

A commodious straight course under the business centre of the city was provided under the busiest street of the busiest section of New England.

Because of its peculiar position, it is in effect a great elongated terminal.

It is midway between the populous suburbs of the south and the rapidly growing suburbs of the north.

Now it became possible to use six, seven or even eight-car trains, and the capacity of the entire elevated system was thereby INCREASED by 70 PER CENT.

Connection with the Tremont Street Subway was established at HAYMARKET SQUARE. By this another great step in the articulation of the system was effected.

But these advantages were obtained only at an enormous cost.

The Washington Street Tunnel is said to be the most expensive mile of road bed in the entire world.

It cost, with equipment, nearly TEN MILLIONS OF DOLLARS, nearly two thousand dollars per running foot.

Over TWELVE HUNDRED DOLLARS A DAY is required to provide for its rental and interest on its equipment.

This entire burden necessarily had to be assumed AT ONCE—a feat which could be accomplished only by the most skilled management.

It required an unbounded confidence in the future and in a COMPREHENSIVE PLAN, of which this tunnel forms an essential part.

Its importance will become more apparent in our succeeding maps.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

As for some time past brokers who believe in higher prices think trading should be confined to the more active stocks, particularly the Harriman Pacifics, Reading, Amalgamated and Steel.

$ $ $

While the Steel share has not been giving the attention to money matters the subject deserves, there is no doubt the profits will prove liberal when the statement is before long. In the meantime quotations drift one way and the other, although the trend unmistakably is upward. Better prices are looked for.

$ $ $

As a rule the market ignores all sorts of news and goes its own way, serene in the knowledge that the interests dealing in the Street are supporting it. How long this will continue is the question, but one feels able to answer that nothing affects the tranquility now, but there may be a change soon, and the easy-going style of doing things given way to activity that will produce rapid results.

$ $ $

Although only 7 per cent of the corn harvest is reported, somewhat in the shape of grain or in grain products, the huge crop promises a heavy traffic for the railroads at home and is one of the influences that will insure a heavy volume of trade.

$ $ $

Some people in Wall Street and elsewhere fear that if there is unrating in the nature of a Democratic landslide this coming month, business will suffer, and suffer severely. There is no good reason for such a view. I entirely disagree with the complaints that the United States Senate will remain Republican and that the Democrats win the Legislatures in all the States where legislatures run high. The control of House of Representatives with a Republican President and Senate can do no great harm to anybody.

$ $ $

That the Steel Trust reported another large shrinkage in the volume of unfilled orders is relatively unimportant, as the big crops will compel the railroads to buy more rolling stock and steel rails soon. Added to these influences there is the certainty that in the near future news of very great importance regarding the Steel Trust will be made public in Washington.

$ $ $

Railroads are not buying new material except what is absolutely necessary to maintain the properties in fairly good shape. But it was discovered a few days ago that they are making long in their car rent reports in a mild form of deception, which is being carefully watched. Executive officers are receiving reports of locomotives, rails and other materials actually needed, together with estimates of the cost. They are having these orders O. K.'d by executive committees before assembling the money to pay for them, but keeping the money in hand and pushing the orders on file in their own offices instead of on the books of the steel companies. Thus there is piling up a vast volume of unfilled orders on the part of companies. At the same time the railroads show the same ratio of expenses, although their income had not been fully filled. This system of bookkeeping is fair in view of the rules of the Interstate Commerce commission requiring the railroads to pay current expenses out of current earnings.

$ $ $

It is probably true that not more than $8,000,000,000 in actual money was originally put into railroad building in the United States. This would leave about $5,000,000,000 of alleged water, because, substracting unpleasant facts, the present railway capital of the United States amounts now to or is more under $13,000,000,000. If the original capital issues had never left the hands of the promoters no more than $60,000,000 might be considered profit, water and manipulation being responsible for the political party one happened to belong to. But the actual cash was distributed among so many new investors that the vast majority of them have lost money. The result is a growth of eight billion dollars to thirteen billion of non-interesting bonds when compared with the profits realized from other industries in a new country.

$ $ $

Amalgamated Copper will rise and fall with the market, but the idea in the Street is that it will earn a good dividend during the year in consequence of the curtailment of the production of the principal mining companies of the country. This is about all there is to it. Consumers have been having their own way heretofore; now the producers will have a chance.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Practically every standard railroad and industrial share quoted gains anywhere from ¼ to 1 point at the opening of the market in Wall Street to-day. A strong tone prevailed throughout the list, and trading in most stocks, particularly the railroad issues, was strong. After the first fifteen or twenty minutes of trading the market took an upward trend and quoted further gains.

Prominent among the stocks was Steel Common, which after the first few minutes quoted 70¼ points. Among the other stocks to quote gains were Amalgamated, which moved up of a point; Amalgamated Copper, which gained a gain of ⅞ of a point; American Smelters ⅝ of a point, Chesapeake & Ohio ⅝, and Southern Pacific ⅝.

Canadian Pacific, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific were other stocks in the railroad stocks. Missouri Pacific was exceptionally strong, as was B. & O.

Mexican was the strong feature among the industrials, the common advancing 2¾ and the preferred 3¼. Third Avenue issues continued strong, that stock quoting 11⅜ after the first half hour of trading. Anaconda stocks were strong in London, quoting gains averaging ⅝ of a point, almost one-fourth of a point.

The copper stocks, however, were weak in the early trading, declines being generated. Prices, though, were not materially changed.

A DICTIONARY WORTH WHILE FOR COUPONS

The most valuable reference book which can be had to-day by people of all ages is Webster's Condensed Dictionary, which contains about 50,000 words in general use and much other data of the greatest value to schools, to business men and to everybody who can read or write. The contents of this book are invaluable to all who wish to read or write or speak correctly and make a good impression on those with whom they have business or social relations.

This dictionary is one of the most useful books in the world. No student, outside of purely technical or professional lines, will be likely to encounter any word which it does not contain and teach how to pronounce and spell as well as give its meaning.

Valuable as Reference.

Because the dictionary is new, its completeness so compels attention. It is established as a handy-sized condensation of the famous Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, the standard typical of the English language, and, although the BOSTON AMERICAN edition is the first to put the valuable of all reference books for the readers of newspapers.

Every reader of the BOSTON AMERICAN should avail himself of this book. They are offered to the reading public in three styles, each unique and distinct, three nominal amounts, besides coupons of consecutive date issues of the AMERICAN. For those who wish to obtain one of these books the following offer is made:

For No. 1, Complete in every way and bound in flexible leather. Seven consecutive issues and sixty-five coupons.

For No. 2, Complete in the same respects as are the others, and supplied with cloth and colored maps. Seven consecutive issues and fifty coupons.

For No. 3, Complete in the same respects as are the others, and supplied with cloth and colored maps. Seven consecutive issues and fifty cents.

Will Be Sent by Mail.

The dictionary coupons will be found on page 2 of the Daily and Sunday AMERICAN, and readers should begin to collect them to-day to be sure that are requisite to obtain a copy of this dictionary. But one coupon will be found in each issue, but coupons must be seven in number and cut on seven consecutive days. For the convenience of those who cannot find the time to call at the Dictionary Department at No. 272 Washington street they will be sent by mail at an extra charge of fifteen cents to pay postage to those who forward by mail the full set of coupons and the books.

It is impossible to obtain an education without thoroughly and comprehensive knowledge of the words in common use in the English language. To learn them it is not necessary to go to college. Everybody who can read can obtain one of these dictionaries and gain possession of a valuable library which will be of lifelong service at work or study in society. One of these books will be found by those who will study it carefully there the best basis for a solid useful education.

Useful in Every Home.

There should be one of them in every home for the sake of the children. Boys and girls going to school will learn how to spell and pronounce correctly, and all the complaints that is being almost universally made now is that children leave school deficient in ability to spell. The best penmanship and a correct choice of words counts for little or nothing unless if words are misspelled. No teacher, no matter how conscientious, can give a pupil such a thorough course in spelling as a child can obtain from Webster's Condensed Dictionary. There is an old saying, "Knowledge is power." All the power which comes from knowledge can be obtained by getting a Webster's Dictionary through the BOSTON AMERICAN.

LIQUOR DEALER IN PULPIT DECLARES SALOONS MUST GO

The saloon as a proposition is undoubtedly the most dangerous part of the liquor traffic. Seventy-five per cent. of the evils connected with the liquor business can be traced directly to the saloon. The drink evil must be exterminated. Economic necessity now demands it. No longer is it a moral issue. Moral suasion and restrictive legislation will settle the liquor problem. George R. Hugo, liquor dealer, from the pulpit of Maverick Congregational Church.

LIQUOR DEALER SCORES SALOON

George R. Hugo, whose family has been in the liquor trade for four generations, and who himself is one of the largest hotliers in this state, declared as a speaker in the pulpit of the Maverick Congregational Church in East Boston that the drink evil must be exterminated and that it is due to the existence of the criminal saloon. He said the retail and wholesale liquor trades should be separated, and that the sale of liquor in places where no food was served with it ought not be be permitted under the law.

Intemperance was not to be prevented by prohibition, he thought, and the saloon which was the product of courses could not be wiped out, as zealous sentimentalists imagined, with one blow. He derided the saying that the saloon is "the poor man's club" and said it was a poor club for any poor man to belong to. He said saloonkeepers should not be taken seriously in the argument that shutting up saloons is interference with personal liberty.

"Putting down the gates at a railroad crossing interferes with personal liberty," he said. "So does compulsory vaccination, but both are necessary to protect the individual. Society has the same right to prevent contagion and the evil results of drunkenness."

He said economic necessity demanded the extermination of the drink evil for the conservation of morality and to put on economic foundations to be permanent.

NANCE O'NEIL IS BACK IN BOSTON

Nance O'Neil, spoken of as the foremost American actress, has returned to Boston after an absence of about three years, to star in David Belasco's production of "The Lily." Miss O'Neil is delighted at this return to Boston, where people like to claim that one was first discovered as a great actress. Her first words were, "The first thing I want you to do is to tell the people of Boston how glad I am to be back here, and how especially glad I am to be here under Mr. Belasco's management, and in a play like this."

"I feel as though I were coming to people that I know and that know me, when I come here. I used to live here, you know, and up to three years ago, used to be here often."

Miss O'Neil was enthusiastic about the play. The lily, which ran for five months in New York last Winter, and for several weeks this Fall. "I do not believe I have ever played in a more wonderful play," she declared. "I never played the part for so long before. You know I have been playing this part for over six months now."

SEEK MISSING MAN WHO SHOT LODGER

Peter Gallo went by mistake to the tenement on the floor above his own at No. 32 Charter street, North End, and trying to open the door with his key, was mistaken for a burglar by an Italian, who opened the door suddenly, and was stabbed in the left side near the heart. Gallo was hurried to the Relief Station, where he is in a critical condition. The police sounded a general alarm for the apprehension of Giuseppi Amato, the owner of the house who immediately disappeared after the stabbing.

IRISH VISITORS AT THE THEATRE

As guests of John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, John E. Redmond, Joseph Devlin and Daniel Boyle, the distinguished Irish visitors, and a dozen representative Bostonians, who have aided in their reception and entertainment, will witness the performance of the American comedy, "The Fortune Hunter" to-night. For many years Mr. Redmond and Mr. Schoeffel have been close personal friends and the theatre party here in the regular program is in kind of return for a visit recently paid the Irishman by the American when Mr. Schoeffel was in Ireland.

FRICK CANCELS BIG GIFT TO PITTSBURG

PITTSBURG, Oct. 10.—Somewhat of a sensation was caused in inner political circles here when it became known that Henry Clay Frick had suddenly changed his mind and withdrawn a proposed gift to the city of 300 acres of land. No reasons were assigned by Mr. Frick for his unexpected action. But is was stated by friends that he had been ready for some time past to turn over the acreage, valued at half a million dollars. As the city could not guarantee it would be immediately put to park purposes it has been withdrawn.

MONAHAN IS DENIED EGG WARRANT AGAIN

Former Senator George F. Monahan appeared before Judge Preble in the Charlestown district court to-day and asked for a warrant for the arrest of a young man upon the charge of hitting him with an egg, thrown during a parade just prior to the Congressional primaries. The warrant was refused. Francis E. Carney went with Mr. Monahan to apply for the warrant. Prior to this Clerk Mark Smith had refused to grant the warrant on the ground of insufficient evidence. Then an application for it made to Judge Bragg had the same result. Judge Preble's decision was the same.

BATTLESHIPS HERE FOR COLUMBUS DAY

The battleships Michigan, Captain Usher, and the Nebraska, Captain Newton, are at the Charlestown Navy Yard. The battleships Rhode Island, Captain Griffin, and the Virginia, Captain Gleason, are expected to reach port to-day. The crews of each of the battleships will participate in the Columbus Day parade on Wednesday. The Michigan is to be put in the dry-dock at Charlestown for repairs.

DANISH SCHOONER LOST.

NORTH SYDNEY, N. S., Oct. 10.—A dispatch from St. John's says that the Danish schooner Kronen parted her anchors, at Bonavista, during a gale, and was carried on the rocks and totally wrecked. The crew was rescued by Bonavista fishermen.

BASLE WANTS A MATCH RACE WITH OLDFIELD

The ida Germas S. P. A., with Charlie Basle driving, is the combination which has challenged Barney Oldfield, driver of that famous 200-horsepower "Blitzen" Benz, to a match race at the coming speed carnival at Readville next Friday afternoon.

To vanquish the speed king is the one ambition of all of New England's high class motor pilots. Basle's challenge is only one of a number and if Oldfield would attempt to race every driver that has challenged him to a match at Readville next Friday afternoon, he would be forced to drive several hundred miles.

Basle's claims are founded on good performances by the past, he having become one of America's foremost drivers at the wheel of the Mercedes and Benzes. He has been out with a challenge to Barney for several years, and should they meet at Readville Friday it will be the culmination of a long feud.

The match race, Barney Oldfield vs. Charlie Basle, will be the premier motor event of the year. Two greater motor pilots have never met in the past years on one of America's tracks and the interest in the motor world will shift to Readville on Friday, the 14th.

Basle has sent the wheels of the giant Ida S. A. to the Michelin factory to have a fast rim put on, in anticipation of Oldfield's acceptance of the challenge. Although seasoned and hardened through competition in the greatest of the world's events, he is exhorbitant over the possibility of his getting a chance at the speed crown at Readville.

GOVERNOR TO GREET CHURCH DELEGATES

The National Congregational Council, which opens to-night in Tremont Temple, will be welcomed by Governor Draper in behalf of the State and by Mayor Fitzgerald for the city. The welcome of the Massachusetts Branch will be given by the Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park Street Church. The response will be made by Rev. Thomas Nicholas Hinman, a member of the Illinois Legislature.

To succeed the chief business of the forenoon will be the election of a moderator. Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, for a quarter of a century pastor of the Trinity Church, the city, our new pastor of the Clinton Ave. Church, Brooklyn, is the choice of the majority of the delegates. He is popular with all classes and is thoroughly acquainted with the denomination, its traditions, its spirit and its work.

BROOKLINE GIRLS ARE ON THE 'HIKE'

"Hiking" is the very latest fad of Brookline girls. A dozen prettily young girls living in the Coolidge Corner district have organized a pedestrian club and each morning the birds are all on a long hike before breakfast. One of the girls, from 6:30 to 7:30 daily before breakfast, exercise after all was walking. She invented her self Friends and each morning they cover several miles before breakfast. Among members of the club are Miss Hazel Wolfson, Miss Claire Levy, Miss Rosebelle Schoenhof, Miss Myers, Hyamson, Miss Helen Myers and Miss Rena White. The pedestrians wear rough and ready walking suits, stout walking boots, sweaters and broad-brimmed sailor hats.

OPEN WORLD HUMANE SESSION AT CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 10.—The first international humane conference held in the United States opened at the New National Museum to-day. An address by the president, Dr. William O. Stillman of Albany, N. Y., outlined a world wide program for the anti-cruelties. It related chiefly to the conservation and protection of the child. One of the distinctive features of the congress is the international exhibit of humane devices in the national museum. Nearly all the anti-cruelty societies in the United States have contributed and not a few from foreign countries.

HERE'S NEW WAY TO CATCH SWORDFISH

Drowning them is the latest way to catch swordfish. John Williams and A. J. Walsh of the fishing schooner Regina have the swordfish to prove it. The fish was brought to T Wharf. The fish was dead. You can't bring a swordfish anywhere till he's dead. Walsh and Williams were trawling off Brown's Bank. They drew up the swordfish, impaled on the lines. There was a stiff fight. The men won. How? They say. "We drowned him. The swordfish didn't like being drowned. In the mix-up he cracked a plank in the bottom of the boat."

5,000 BLUEJACKETS NOW IN THIS PORT

The battleships Rhode Island and Nevada arrived today at the Charlestown Navy Yard from the target waters off the Virginia coast. The Michigan and Montana arrived last week and before them came the New Jersey, the Indiana and the scout cruisers Chester and Salem. There are about 5,000 United States bluejackets now in this port and many of them will appear in the Columbus Day parade. The ships are here for minor repairs and will stay about a week.

MAN RESCUED FROM BROKEN POWER BOAT

HULL, Oct. 10.—Overcome from exposure all night in a broken down power boat, Charles Holbrook was picked up today in Hull bay by John Clawson, caretaker of the Burgess hospital. Holbrook belongs on Peddocks Island, where he is employed by John Burgess. He went in the power boat late yesterday afternoon in search of another boat, when his boat broke down.

FISHERMEN CLAIM CREDIT OF RESCUE

Claims of police officers to the effect that they saved Mary Fayter from drowning, at Commercial wharf recently, is disputed by William Holden and Peter Harris of the fishing schooner Regina. They assert that they pulled the woman out of the water, and not the police. Moreover, the other had to go to Station 8, before the police got wind of the woman's plight.

FINED FOR OVERSPEEDING.

In the Quincy District Court to-day the Milton police charged six automobilists with overspeeding while going to the Beckton fair. The following pleaded nolo and were each assessed $10 costs: Patrick J. Maney, Louis J. Killion, Harold S. Nelson and Edward Callahan of Boston and Walter Lefmark of Lynn.

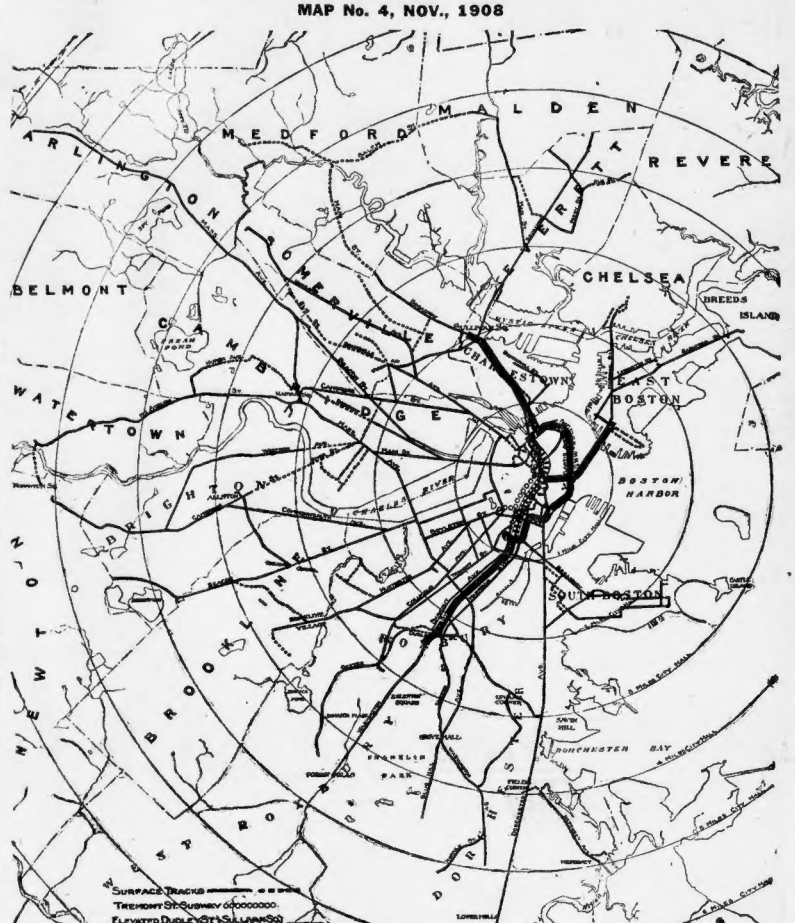
FREDERICK TOPPIN RESIGNS

Frederick Toppin has resigned as director of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, owing to change of his office from this city to New York. He was elected to the board at formation of the new chamber and has been the representative on it of the International Mercantile Marine Company.

What the Boston Elevated Has Done for Rapid Transit

Extensions and Additions, Subway, Elevated and Surface, Which It Has Provided

MAP No. 4, NOV., 1908



From map of Boston & Suburbs, Copyright, Geo. H. Walker & Co., Walker Lith. & Pub. Co.

The Boston Elevated Railway Company is showing the additions and extensions which it has made to its system. On September 28 was shown the surface lines and the Tremont Street Subway as in January, 1898. This was when the Boston Elevated took charge. On October 3 there was shown in addition the original elevated system. On October 5 was shown the East Boston Tunnel.

To the above is now added the Washington Street Tunnel shown thus [illegible]

The crooked spine of the elevated system was STRAIGHTENED by the completion of the WASHINGTON STREET TUNNEL.

Then the Tremont Street Subway was restored to its originally intended use —surface cars.

By the tunnel, the running time from Dudley Street to Sullivan Square, cut from 45 MINUTES TO 21, was still further cut from 21 to 18½ MINUTES.

A commodious straight course under the business centre of the city was provided under the busiest street of the busiest section of New England.

Because of its peculiar position, it is in effect a great elongated terminal.

It is midway between the populous suburbs of the south and the rapidly growing suburbs of the north.

Now it became possible to use six, seven or even eight-car trains, and the capacity of the entire elevated system was thereby INCREASED by 70 PER CENT.

Connection with the Tremont Street Subway was established at HAYMARKET SQUARE. By this another great step in the articulation of the system was effected.

But these advantages were obtained only at an enormous cost.

The Washington Street Tunnel is said to be the most expensive mile of road bed in the entire world.

It cost, with equipment, nearly TEN MILLIONS OF DOLLARS, nearly two thousand dollars per running foot.

Over TWELVE HUNDRED DOLLARS A DAY is required to provide for its rental and interest on its equipment.

This entire burden necessarily had to be assumed AT ONCE—a feat which could be accomplished only by the most skilled management.

It required an unbounded confidence in the future and in a COMPREHENSIVE PLAN, of which this tunnel forms an essential part.

Its importance will become more apparent in our succeeding maps.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS
STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS
STEADY JUMPS ON ALL STOCKS

As for some time past brokers who believe in higher prices think trading should be confined to the more active stocks, particularly the Harriman Pacifics, Reading, Amalgamated and Steel.

$ $ $

While the Street has not been giving the attending to money matters the utmost deserves, there is no doubt the problem will force itself into prominence before long. In the meantime quotations drift one way and the other, although the trend unmistakably is upward. Better prices are looked for.

$ $ $

As a rule the market ignores all sorts of news except its own way, serene in the knowledge that the dominant interests in the Street are supporting it. How long this will continue is the question that no one feels able to answer. Nothing affects the tranquility now, but there must be a change soon, and the present easy-going style of doing things cannot last. Activity that will produce rapid results.

$ $ $

Although only 7 per cent. of the corn harvest is exported, whether in the shape of grain or in grain products, the total crop provides a heavy tonnage for the railroads at home and is one of the influences that will insure a heavy volume of trade.

$ $ $

Some people in Wall Street and elsewhere fear that if there is anything in the nature of a Democratic landslide this fall the month stock market prices will suffer severely. There is no good reason for any violent supposition. It is a reasonable certainty that the United States Senate will remain Republican even if the Democrats win the Legislatures in the States where their hopes run high. A Democratic House of Representatives with a Republican President and Senate can do no great harm to anybody.

$ $ $

That the Steel Trust reported another large shrinkage in the volume of unfilled orders is decidedly unimportant, as the big crops will compel the railroads to buy more rolling stock and steel rails soon. Added to these influences there is the certainty that in the near future news of very great importance regarding the Steel Trust will be made public in Washington.

$ $ $

Railroads are not buying new material except what is absolutely necessary to maintain the properties in fairly good shape. But it was discovered a few days ago that they are indulging in their current reports in a mild form of deception, which is perhaps pardonable. The railroad officers are receiving reports of locomotives, rails and other materials actually needed, together with estimates of the cost. These are laid before a meeting of the directors, and executive committees and setting aside the money to pay for them, and keeping the money in the bank and putting the orders on file in their own offices instead of in the books of the steel companies. Thus there is piling up a vast volume of unfilled orders with the steel companies. At the same time the railroads show the same figures in their reports though these orders had actually been filled. Future publications are to be in view of the rules of the Interstate Commerce Commission requiring the railroads to pay current expenses out of current earnings.

$ $ $

It is probably true that not more than $8,000,000,000 in actual money was originally put in all the railroads of the United States. This would leave about $5,000,000,000 in alleged fictitious values, existing duplications, the outstanding railway capital of the United States amounts now to a trifle under $12,000,000,000. If the original capital became lost entirely in the hands of the original owners this $5,000,000,000 might be considered simply as water and nothing more. According to the political party one happened to belong to, But the stocks are distributed among so many new investors that the vast majority represent real investments, and a growth of eight billion dollars in 30 years is a trifle to be distributed when compared with the profits realized from other industries in a new country.

$ $ $

Amalgamated Copper will rise and fall with the market, but there is in the two-cent dividend will assure a good advance before the year is out because of the curtailment of the production of all the copper companies of the country. This is about all there is to it. Amalgamated may have been having their own way heretofore; now the producers will have a chance.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Practically every standard railroad and industrial share quoted gains anywhere from ¼ to 1 point at the opening of the market in Wall Street to-day. A strong tone prevailed throughout the list, and trading in most stocks, particularly the railroad issues, was strong. After the first fifteen or twenty minutes of trading the market took an upward trend and quoted further gains.

The prominent issues in stocks was Steel Common, which after the first few minutes quoted 34, following a gain during the last week of 2¾ points. Other prominent stocks to quote gains were Reading, which after a gain of 4 point; Amalgamated Copper quoted a gain of ⅝ of a point, American Smelters ⅝ of a point, Chesapeake & Ohio ¾ and Southern Pacific ¾.

Canadian Pacific, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific were other active standard railroad issues. Missouri Pacific was exceptionally strong, as was B. & O.

Market was the strong feature among the industrials, the common advancing ¾ and preferred ⅝. Third Avenue issues continued strong, the stock quoting 115 after the first half hour of trading. American Smelters were strong in London, quoting 3 averaging ⅝ of a point in almost every instance. Trading since noon, however, was weak. On the Curb brisk trading predominated. Prices, though, were not materially changed.

The Dawn Breaks in Portugal

After Long Ages of Darkness and Despair, Ignorance, Poverty and Decay, Hope Shines at Last

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

Every man who believes in republican government and believes that the effort of the people to rule themselves justly must succeed in spite of temporary disappointment will rejoice in the action of the citizens of Portugal.

After centuries of poverty, misery, ignorance and brutality, Portugal has decided to free herself from the worthless crowd that ruled her in the name of Divine Right. She has sent her king to join his friends, the other parasites, and announces her determination to rule herself.

The man is impertinent who questions the right of a people to throw off a monarchy and take the reins of government into their own hands.

The man is unfit to live in America, unworthy of the opportunities won by our ancestors, if he questions the right of Portugal to do for the Portuguese what America more than one hundred years ago did for Americans.

It is all good news that comes from Portugal. There is some brutality—that is inevitable—and the brutality has been infinitely less than that which accompanied our own struggle here in America. Great prizes must be paid for, and liberty is a very great prize.

It is encouraging to learn, first of all, that it was the army that set the people free.

Rulers "by Divine Right" surround themselves with soldiers and think that they are permanently strengthening their throne and their Divine Right.

They forget that these soldiers are men. And they are surprised like foolish children when they find that the men in the barracks, the men in the uniforms, the men with the guns and the swords, walk out into the streets and join the men that have been working in the factories, and when the time comes overthrow Divine Right and its preposterous rule of parasites.

What has happened in Portugal now, as we told you long ago, will happen one day in Germany.

That vast army which the Kaiser believes to be a fighting machine that shall always keep the Hohenzollerns in power will turn out to be A THINKING MACHINE, which will make of Germany a republic.

If ever there was a country on the earth that needed republican government, REPUBLICAN PUBLIC SCHOOLS, republican opportunity and equality, that country is Portugal.

If you could go to Lisbon, where that worthless little king has been sitting on the throne, between trips to the music halls of Paris and London, you would find a city dejected, degraded, poverty stricken, miserable.

In Portugal eighty per cent. of the population are unable to read or write—do you need any other condemnation of the vile government under which the people have suffered?

Lisbon and Portugal have been the abode of poverty, of ignorance, of sorrow, of superstition.

There are fewer than six millions of people in Portugal, and weighing on their backs they have a public debt of EIGHT HUNDRED MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

The outlook for that people seemed hopeless. But nothing is hopeless on this earth, for the human brain has within itself the power to achieve freedom and opportunity.

The work has begun in Portugal—success to it and long life to the young republic.

May the day soon come when the population of six millions of half-fed people will be a population of twenty millions of free citizens, when the debt of eight hundred millions will be paid, or, better still, the part that has been squandered by the monarchs repudiated and a new debt contracted for public schools and public libraries.

Every decent American sympathizes with this revolution in Portugal.

Every American fit to live in this country or in any republic ardently hopes that Spain will follow the example of Portugal; that the people of Spain, with their old power and force, will decide to rule themselves, driving THEIR little sample of Divine Right to the metropolitan music halls to associate there permanently with the worthless little Portuguese parasite.

There is some talk of interference from England in case Spain should strive for republican rule. An English princess sits on the Spanish throne, true. But the English have learned one lesson, which is, that it is not a good enterprise to interfere with men trying to get their liberty.

If Spain wants to be free, she will be free, and with no interference from England.

The English princess can take her half Spanish babies and go home to London to live happily.

England has too much to think about in Germany to bother about Spain.

COLDFEETO THE MONK

BY Gus Mager

AFRAID! POOH!
I SHOULD THINK YOU'D BE AFRAID TO STAY UP THERE ON THAT ROOF!
NOT SO YOU'D NOTICE IT!
AREN'T YOU WORRIED THE LEAST BIT?
NOT ME! I LIKE IT!
WELL, A LOT OF PEOPLE WOULD BE!
OH SO SO, PERHAPS.
YOU CERTAINLY ARE A NERVY CHAP!
WHAT?
IF I KNEW THE HOUSE WAS AFIRE DOWN BELOW I'D
I'M GOING TO GET MY HAIR CUT!
WHERE YOU GOING, COLDFEETO?

Progressive Candidates Will Be Nominated

Every man of Progressive political ideas and ideals could conscientiously support the platform adopted by the Democratic party of Massachusetts.

It is straight in line with the honest and best political thought of the day.

There should be candidates for the highest State offices to match it.

There is a demand for candidates of that calibre to advocate it, and the DEMAND IS STRONG ENOUGH TO ELECT CANDIDATES whose honesty of purpose is unquestioned.

This demand is too strong to be slighted. There WILL BE CANDIDATES TO FIT THE PLATFORM.

The Progressive element of the State WILL HAVE AN OPPORTUNITY to vote for Progressive candidates.

The Democratic platform in ITSELF is splendid, but the platform, weighed down by candidates not in hearty sympathy with it, would make an IMPOSSIBLE COMBINATION, one NOT to be tolerated by intelligent and sincere men.

That platform upheld by candidates for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor in positive accord with the Progressive trend of the times would make a WINNING COMBINATION, one that would be welcomed with enthusiasm by thousands upon thousands of Independents and Republicans of independent tendencies.

The next few hours will tell the story. The fate of the Democratic party and the hope of the Progressives are in the hands of the committee delegated by the State convention to select candidates to succeed those whose names have been filed with the Secretary of State.

The BOSTON AMERICAN has reason to believe that the members of that committee realize fully the importance and seriousness of their duty. It is for them to say whether or no the voters who are desirous for a change in this State shall JOIN HANDS WITH THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY THIS YEAR OR PUT FORWARD CANDIDATES OF THEIR OWN.

It would be foolish to divide the forces of political progress. To unite them would be the sensible and successful thing to do.

The members of the Democratic nominating committee are men of experience. By their actions they will show their political size. To few men has been given such a chance to display good citizenship or such an opportunity to serve a great party and a large body of non-partisans.

By the conduct of a small number of Boston ward politicians the Democratic convention was wrecked. The chances of success were temporarily retarded. There is yet TIME TO REPAIR THE DAMAGE and to win deserved success.

The sober second view of the people is seeing the Democratic convention in a better light. It accomplished a great deal that was EXCELLENT. Besides the admirable platform it nominated as a temporary candidate for Governor an honest, earnest and able citizen. Few will question the assertion that he has the best interests of his party and State at heart. And he may be relied upon NOT TO RETIRE for any man who is selfishly identified with Special Interests or who is inimical to legislation in behalf of a better deal for legitimate business interests and working people.

Fair-minded people will not blame the Democratic party as a whole or vote against a good Democratic ticket just because heelers obeyed the orders of bosses and threw the convention into disorder, preventing the transaction of business in the spirit of fairness.

But there MUST BE a GOOD Democratic ticket in every meaning of the word GOOD. There must be no misfits. And there must be NO MORE CONSIDERATION of the WISHES of the BOSSES.

Boston factions have been altogether too prominent and too disturbing. They should be taught that they do not make up the entire party. This committee should select candidates who are above factions, who are big enough to represent the biggest and the best interests and elements of Democracy.

Discouraging as the Democratic convention was, in some respects, it must be said, in all truth, that there was nothing encouraging about the Republican convention. Of course, it WAS WELL BEHAVED.

But it did not sound a single note of hope. The same old Stand-pat songs were sung and the same old reactionary doctrines were presented only slightly veneered. NOT A REFORM THAT THE PEOPLE ARE DEMANDING relative to the conduct of State affairs was hinted at, and no promise was made that the Massachusetts Republicans would favor legislative action to relieve the people from the high cost of living imposed upon them by a tariff law framed in behalf of the Trusts and Special Interests.

It will not do for the Republicans to try to evade proper discussion of vital issues by criticising the Democratic convention nor for Governor Draper to weep crocodile tears over the actions of a small minority of that convention.

A BATTERED convention is not to be praised, but it is not half so bad as a DRUGGED convention.

The real issues that affect and hold the attention of the people are going to be discussed in this campaign. The things that Governor Draper has done and the things he has left undone are going to be explained to the voters in their true light.

The Governor is going to be called upon to tell why he has been so set against all Progressive measures for the common good.

The Democrats of the country have been looking to the Democracy of Massachusetts to win a battle in the war of political progress even more decisive than the victory of the Progressives of Maine.

They have expected that, in the campaign for right principles, the Massachusetts Democrats would be found fighting gallantly under brave and able generals, and that they would not handicap the forward movement by putting the leadership in weak or unworthy hands.

The four members of the Democratic nominating committee must know this, and, knowing it, they must realize HOW IMPERATIVE IT IS for them to put aside every consideration but that which will afford the people of the State an opportunity to vote for the candidates best equipped to make the strongest fight against the Republican ticket.
